Examiner Rules Mass Picketing Violates Law

80 in Line Called Coercive Whether Orderly or Violent; Union May Appeal

By the United Press

A trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday that mass picketing, peaceful or violent, violates the Taft-Hartley Act.

In the first ruling on this issue, the examiner, Irving Rogosin, found that even peaceful picketing "has an intimidatory and coercive effect upon employes otherwise willing to cross a picket line." But he said it is impossible to lay down a single definition of just what is and what is not mass picketing.

"Determination of what constitutes mass picketing must necessarily depend on the circumstances in each case," he added.

Rogosin made his ruling in a case involving Local 1150 of the CIO United Electrical Workers and the Cory Corp., Chicago. He found that 80 to 200 pickets, patroling in front of the company plant, were enough to be called a mass of pickets. Therefore he recommended that the union stop mass picketing of the plant.

If neither the company nor the union challenges Rogosin's ruling within 20 days, it will have the effect of a labor ruling, enforceable in the court of appeals. If either party objects, however, the full labor board must review the ruling and make a final decision.

Rogosin said that while the Taft-Hartley Act protects the right of free speech and expression of both employers and union members he felt that mass picketing "exceeds the bounds of peaceful persuasion and is not privileged or protected as free speech." He said that a mass of pickets, parading in front of any plant, would interfere with workers wishing to enter or leave the company premises.

"Employes, willing to cross a picket line, are not required to await a fortuitous breach in the lines, and to so time their entrance or exit as to avoid encounter with the pickets," he said.

Overtime Ruling To Be Enforced, Starting Today

By The Associated Press

The Wage-Hour Administration begins today to enforce the Supreme Court's ruling on overtime pay for workers on less desirable night or weekend shifts.

The court ruled that the extra pay they get for working the odd shifts is a part of their regular wages—the base on which overtime was figured.

Before the Supreme Court ruled in June, fears were expressed that millions of dollars in employes' suits for back pay might result. That remains to be seen.

AFL President William Green appealed to all his unions not to take advantage of the decision. A flood of suits which might endanger the financial position of employers would stir Congress to amend—or maybe wipe out—the wage and hour law, Green suggested. He cautioned employes to use the decision as a guide for the future, but not to try to penalize the boss for not paying the rates in the past.

The law is enforced by William R. McComb, Wage and Hour administrator. He followed through the Supreme Court's ruling with regulations interpreting the decision.

But he put off enforcement until the court could dispose of an appeal for a rehearing. The court last week denied the appeal. So its decision stands

Frankfurt, Germany, Oct. 18 (AP).—Three Americans were killed early today in the crash of a C-54 Berlin airlift plane. It crashed near Frankfurt's busy Rhine main airport. This brought to 13 the number of Americans who have died ferrying food and supplies to Berlin.

Truman Drafts Legion Talk in Stopover Here

Hears ECA Reports, Receives Football Team, Democratic Committee

By The Associated Press

President Truman took advantage yesterday of a 38-hour break in his travels to work on a "'nonpolitical" address to his comrades in the American Legion.

From 4 p. m. Saturday, when he came back from a six-day Midwestern campaign swing, to 6 a. m. today, when he takes off for the national Legion convention at Miami, Mr. Truman set himself a crowded schedule.

He listened yesterday morning to brief reports on conditions abroad, particularly in China, from Paul Hoffman and Roger Lapham of the Economic Cooperation Administration.

He received the University of Missouri football team, victors yesterday over Navy.

Receives National Committee

He prepared notes for two more speeches—one of them frankly a campaign effort—to be delivered at Raleigh, N. C., on Tuesday.

He examined and signed a sheaf of official documents, and conferred with his staff.

And he found time, within an hour after his special train pulled in Saturday, to join Mrs. Truman in receiving some 350 Democratic National Committee members and others at a White House tea.

Heading into the final two weeks of the campaign, Mr. Truman says he is quite confident of winning a full four-year term as President. The people who have been taking some of the polls are going to be startled when the returns come in, he told a news conference just before his arrival at the Capital.

He expressed gratification at the

ITU Official Set For Labor Post

By the United Press

President Truman will appoint Ralph Wright, an official of the International Typographical Union, Assistant Secretary of Labor, it was revealed yesterday.

The appointment will be made today or Tuesday.

Wright, currently secretary of the Allied Printing Trade Council of New York, will replace John Kmetz who resigned last July. The appointment will leave two top jobs open in the Labor Department—one assistant secretaryship and the undersecretaryship.

Dewey Hears Home Rector, Calls Warren

Doubtful Senate Seats Believed Subject of Long-Distance Talk

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Owosso, Mich., Oct. 17.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey went to church in his old home town today, ate one of his mother's roast-turkey dinners, and then put in a long-distance call for Gov. Earl Warren in Sacramento, Calif.

What the two men talked about was their business, but it was hardly nonpolitical.

The Republican nominee for president probably wasted little time talking to his running mate about their own prospects. Everything indicates that, as of today, they are "in."

The supposition here in Owosso was that their conversation dealt largely with some of the disturbing aspects of the GOP political picture. There are some, and worry No. 1 is the United States Senate.

Senate Seats Periled

In Governor Dewey's current swing, he has visited two States where Republican Senate seats are in great peril—Oklahoma and Minnesota. On his first campaign tour, he found a third seat in danger. This was Wyoming.

A fourth Senate seat that may be lost to the Republicans is in West Virginia. It is held by Sen-

Baby Is Killed As Boy, 4, Drops Him on Sidewalk

A month-old baby was injured fatally yesterday when a 4-year-old neighborhood boy dropped him on the sidewalk.

The baby, Michael Dawson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Dawson, 1323 R st. nw., was lying in his carriage in front of 1207 T st. nw., where his parents were visiting, police said.

The older child, Jerome Hawkins, 1211 T st. nw., son of Mrs. Lucille Hawkins, tried to lift the infant and in doing so dropped him, police said.

An unidentified neighbor rushed Michael to Children's Hospital where he was pronounced dead. Deputy Coroner Richard Rosenberg ordered the body to the morgue pending an autopsy today.

The victim's father is a messenger at the Pentagon Building.

'Syndicate Involved'

Police Chief Says He Knows Who Killed 'Bugsy' Siegel

Beverly Hills, Calif., Oct. 17 (AP).—Police Chief Clinton H. Anderson said today he knows who killed Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel, but added, "the persons involved are so big we can't go out and give them the bum's rush."

Siegel was slain June 20, 1947, as he sat reading a newspaper in the Beverly Hills mansion of a girl friend, Miss Virginia Hills. Four bullets were fired into his body.

Chief Anderson, who arrived home by air today from New York City, described Siegel as a Los Angeles ganglord and said he was killed on orders of "an international underworld syndicate" because he threatened to talk.

The first big break has developed in the case, Anderson said, declining to elaborate. "This was no ordinary shooting," he added. "There was big money behind it."

He said he needs only time to gather more corroborating evidence before making an arrest. "We have been taking our time, gathering evidence because there is no statute of limitations on murder cases."

The chief said that while he was in New York for the convention of the International Chiefs of Police, he contacted many people, gathering evidence in the Siegel case.

Siegel operated the lavish Flamingo Club at Las Vegas, Nev.

Before coming to Los Angeles in the late 1930s, Siegel was indicted in New York as one of those who harbored Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, New York gangster than a fugitive from justice.

He was charged with murder in Los Angeles in 1939 in the slaying of Harry (Big Greenie) Greenberg, but was freed.

Mercury Due To Hit 34 Here Tonight

Chilling Rain Also Expected; Snow Reported in Va., W. Va., and Tenn.

Washingtonians are slated to feel winter's frigid breath today as snow and cold already took over States farther west.

Locally, the mercury was expected to drop during the day to 54, 25 degrees below yesterday's high of 78. The weatherman said a cold air mass is working its way down from the Northern Plain States.

For tonight, the best the weatherman can offer is a downright chilly 34, which is nothing compared with 6 above yesterday morning in Cheyenne, Wyo.: 12 in Bismarck, N. Dak.; and 13 at Williston, N. Dak.

Chilly Rain Due

A chilling rain is also in the offing for today with an overcast sky remaining at least until midnight.

Elsewhere snow was reported in parts of Virginia, West Virginia and Tennessee as the mercury began a precipitous decline.

Heavy flakes began falling steadily in the Norton, Va., area at about 9:30 p. m. while in Beckley, W. Va., a freezing mixture of snow and rain began pelting the ground at about 8:30 p. m.

Earlier snow flurries were reported in Monterey, in north central Tennessee, while sleet and snow fell in some southern portions of the State.

The North Plains States were experiencing below freezing temperatures as well as scattered snow with the cold air mass felt from the northern Rockies to Texas, Kentucky and Michigan.

Snow piled up an inch and a half at Mount Summit, Pa., within an hour after the fall started, while at Uniontown, Pa., slush made the highways hazardous.

Granddaughter Won't Fight Will of Mrs. Patterson

Santa Monica, Calif., Oct. 17 (AP).—Mrs. Ellen Pearson Arnold, granddaughter of the late Mrs. Eleanor (Cissy) Patterson, publisher of the Washington, D. C., Times-Herald, does not intend to join her mother in a legal fight to break Mrs. Patterson's will.

Mrs. Arnold, daughter of Columnist Drew Pearson, said yesterday she didn't feel that she "had any claim on her."

Countess Felicia Gizycka, her mother, is trying to break the will which left the bulk of a 12 million dollar estate to employes of the newspaper.

"I am not a direct heir and grandmother never contributed to my support," Mrs. Arnold explained.

Yak-Tail Dealers Here Illegally, Nanking Charges

Nanking, Oct. 17 (AP).—The Chinese government has ordered its Washington embassy to find out what those Tibetan yak-tail traders are up to in the United States.

The six-man mission from Tibet was last heard of in Washington and New York last August.

Shakabpa, leader of the mission, said at the time he hoped to barter yak tails for American and British machinery (after some confusion, it developed that yaktails are used as beards for superduper Santa Claus costumes.)

China retains suzerainty over Tibet.

Polk Killed By Top Red, Greece Says

Salonika, Greece, Oct. 17 (AP).—The Greek government today named a top Communist as the wanted trigger man in the slaying last May of CBS correspondent George Polk.

It quoted one of four persons accused of complicity in the crime as believing the murder was planned by the Cominform (Communist International Information Bureau) and carried out by the Greek Communist party to discredit the Greek government abroad.

An official announcement named the trigger man as Adam Mouzenides, a member of the central committee of the Greek Communist Party, who is still at large. Mouzenides sent a bullet into the back of Polk's head as the American lay blindfolded and trussed in a boat in Salonika bay last May 8, the statement said.

[Polk's last words, as he was being tied, were said by the United Press to have been: "This is a splendid adventure."]

The other three named were Evangelos Vasvanas, who is also at large; Gregory Staktopoulos, Communist newspaperman in Salonika; and Staktopoulos' mother, Anna.

Staktopoulos was quoted in the announcement as saying:

The United States official saw King Paul, Premier Themistokles Sophoulis and Acting Foreign Minister Stephanes Stephanopoulos. This evening, Marshall and his wife dined with the King and Queen.

It was considered a certainty the whole program of American aid to Greece was reviewed.

Marshall showed his concern over the Greek aid program by leaving Paris at a delicate time. Before his arrival in Athens, United States Ambassador Henry F. Grady said the Greek military situation was "not completely satisfactory."

After Marshall arrived, War Minister George Stratos revealed morale in the Greek army had been impaired by continued aid to the guerillas from Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

One of Marshall's first acts was to obtain a military briefing from Lieut. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, head of the U. S. military mission. The Greeks have been unable to launch a full-scale offensive against Rebel Leader Markos Vafiades in the northern Vitsi triangle.

Marshall also is inquiring into the economic aid program.

The Secretary of State visited the Piraeus area and saw 12 American warships.

Marshall decided against making a proposed radio talk to the Greek people tonight and scheduled a press conference for Monday morning. He plans to fly to Paris following the conference.

FBI Investigates

Technical Papers in Home Of Atom Scientist Ransacked

Oakland, Calif., Oct. 17 (AP).—The FBI was called in tonight to investigate the ransacking of a mass of highly technical data in the residence of Francie R. Bichowsky, atomic scientist who, friends say, left for Washington three weeks ago on "secret work for the Government."

Bichowsky, an instructor in thermodynamics at the University of California, was one of the scientists who assisted the Army and Navy in the atomic tests at Bikini.

Police were considering the possibility of espionage. They found Bichowsky's papers strewn all over his study, but valuables had not been touched.

The intrusion was discovered by Miss E. Nellie Catena, a San Francisco friend of Bichowsky, who told police she had promised him to visit the residence "just to make certain everything was all right."

She found a rear door, leading from the street to the first-floor study, had been jimmied open.

Police said the burglary evidently was the work of someone "who knew precisely what he was looking for and possibly could have been searching for atomic data he thought Bichowsky might have."

There was no safe in the study. Bichowsky kept his papers in several desks. It was these papers that had been scattered around the study.

Miss Catena has been visiting the residence every Sunday since Bichowsky left for Washington with his wife for a "conference," which friends said was secret and which he did not discuss. The study was in order last Sunday.

4 Die as Plane Crash Lands With 34 Passengers

Clinton, La., Oct. 17 (AP).—Four persons were killed when an Air Force transport plane with 34 persons aboard crash-landed 7 miles northeast of here late today.

A fifth man was injured critically. The others escaped with scratches.

Occupants of the twin-engined C-82 included 29 artillery officers, one enlisted man and a four-man Air Force crew.

The plane was flying from Biggs Field, Tex., to Eglin Field, Fla.

(State police at Baton Rouge said the C-82 was the lead plane in a seven-plane convoy.)

Brig. Gen. C. H. Hart of Fort Bliss, Tex., one of the survivors, said trouble developed in one engine.

Truman Told Of ECA Aid To N. China

President 'Pleased' By Lapham Report On Use of Funds in Embattled Areas

By the United Press

President Truman held an extraordinary Sunday conference with Foreign Aid Administrator Paul G. Hoffman and Roger Lapham, head of the Economic Cooperation Administration in China, and reportedly was "pleased" by the results.

The White House said the two officials gave the Chief Executive a "progress report" on the 275-million-dollar United States program for China's economic recovery. To date, they said, 70 million dollars has been set aside for specific recovery projects, including $5,500,000 for Nationalist-held areas in Communist-dominated North China.

Lapham, former Mayor of San Francisco, told reporters the program is "helping" check the spread of communism in the Orient.

Hoffman, who recently gave the White House a progress report on European recovery, referred all inquiries to Lapham.

Called "Decision Area"

Charles G. Ross, White House secretary, said Mr. Truman was "pleased" by results of the program thus far and was "glad to hear" that funds had been included for ECA projects in North China.

A special ECA survey group, headed by Charles Stillman, recommended after a recent trip to North China that the $5,500,000 be alloted to Communist-surrounded "free" areas for rebuilding railroads, power lines and other industrial facilities destroyed in the Nationalist-Communist fighting.

A House Foreign Affairs subcommittee recently described China as the "decisive area" in the tug-of-war between Russia and the West and recommended greater financial aid from the United States. This Nation, it said, "is the sole entity in the world today so endowed with political power that it could conceivably extend to China an effective guaranty of territorial and political integrity."

Hoffman and Lapham declined to discuss the China program with newsmen, except in general terms. There have been reports that the Administration hopes to double the 275-million-dollar ECA program and toss another 125 million dollars into its current program of 125 million dollars in straight military aid.

Lapham recently returned after four months in the Orient where most of his traveling—10,000 miles—was by air. He plans to go back to China within the next two weeks.

He was asked what effect the United States recovery program is having on Asia in the "cold war" with Russia. But Hoffman interjected that he did not like use of

Reds Infiltrate YWCA, Education League Charges

New York, Oct. 17 (AP).—Extensive Communist infiltration into the YWCA was charged today by the Constitutional Education League.

"In 1948," the league said, "114 national board committee memberships and headquarters staff posts are held by "Y" leaders whose Communist or Communist-front affiliation are a matter of official record in Washington."

The league made its charges in a 68-page booklet, entitled "Behind the Lace Curtains of the YWCA."

Mrs. Arthur F. Anderson, president of the national board of the YWCA, said the booklet was a "sorry compilation of inaccuracies, insidious half-truths, perverted facts, and flagrant suppression of the ultimate truth."

Drive to Combat 'Defamation' Launched by Scientist Group

Princeton, N. J. Oct. 17 (AP).—A campaign to "combat unsubstantiated public defamation" of scientists named in loyalty or security investigations was announced today.

The Federation of American Scientists, announcing a new "committee on loyalty problems," said it would seek "fair and full hearings" from Government agencies and congressional committees for scientists criticized by them.

At a news conference called by the new committee, Prof. Henry D. Smyth, author of the official report on the atomic bomb, stressed that the committee's purposes were nonpolitical.

"This committee recognizes that clearance and loyalty are extremely difficult problems and not one-sided," said the head of the Princeton University physics department. "Some scientists don't realize there are two sides.

The Air Force yesterday issued a call for 10,000 of its former airmen to reenlist for immediate assignment to the Berlin airlift.

They would replace men who have completed their foreign tours of duty, men whose enlistments are expiring, and men in Europe on temporary duty. Total strength of the Air Force in Europe will not be increased.

The appeal came on the heels of President Truman's executive order instructing Defense Secretary James Forrestal to step up Army-Air Force reserve programs. Mr. Truman emphasized that he not only wants the reserves built up

De Gaullist Allies Lead In French Vote

Independent Radicals Ahead in First Phase Of Council Election

Paris (Monday), Oct. 18 NYHT.—Nearly complete returns in the first phase of the elections of the Council of the Republic, the upper house of parliament, showed early today that the Independent Radicals, who had formed an alliance with Gen. Charles DeGaulle's Rally of the French People (RPF) in many parts of France, had won a commanding lead.

The late figures also showed the RPF was making a fair showing on its own, standing in third place in the returns from all but a handful of the 90-odd departments into which the nation is divided.

Socialists, displaying unexpected strength, were in second place. The Radical Socialists (Conservative) in fourth, and Communist, fifth.

General de Gaulle's party appeared far from winning the 40 per cent of the votes which it received in the municipal elections last fall. However, that was a direct vote in which the general public participated, and yesterday's balloting was limited to the members of the country's 38,000 municipal councils.

In the first step in the complicated indirect election of the Council of the Republic yesterday, the municipal councils elected more than 100,000 delegates who will meet as an electoral college on November 7 to choose the 320 members of the upper house. Also included in the electoral college are the 546 deputies of the National Assembly and the nation's 3032 general councilors.

The returns from 90 departments, covering 99,048 delegates, at midnight were as follows:

Independent Radicals, 21,178; Socialists, 17,590; RPF, 12,998; Radical Socialists, 12,324; Communists, 10,249; Popular Republican Movement, 8980; Independent Socialists, 8424; Republican Liberty Party, 3292; Democratic and Socialist Union of the Resistance, 809, and various others, 3202.

Earlier the Ministry of the Interior had announced figures based on returns from 34 departments which showed the supposedly weak Socialists were leading both the Communists and the De Gaullists.

However, the Interior Ministry warned at that time that "totaling up the number of delegates of the more important departments in no way gives an advance indica-

Jews Say Wedges Hammered Into Lines Protecting New Arab Capital

Tel Aviv, Israel, Oct. 17 (AP).—The southern Palestine front burst into full flame as Israel and Egypt battled for control of the Negev.

Israeli military headquarters said Jewish infantry hammered wedges into Egyptian troop bases on an arc-like front protecting Gaza, main Egyptian military base and capital of the new Arab Palestine government.

The Egyptians hit back with artillery fire directed at Jewish settlements, the headquarters report said.

Israeli Gains Reported

[The United Press quoted advices from the front as reporting Israeli forces have captured a strategic height which threatens to cut off the bulk of Egyptian front-zone forces from their base at Gaza in southern Palestine.]

Reports circulated here that United States Consul James MacDonald had handed the Israel government a request from the United States State Department to end the fighting. MacDonald's aides refused to deny or confirm.

An Israeli army communique claimed heavy casualties were inflicted on the Egyptians.

Both newsmen and U. N. observers were barred by the Jews from going within 50 miles of the actual fighting.

U.N. Action Possible

[At Paris Dr. Ralph Bunche, acting United Nations mediator for Palestine, today told Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok that if fighting did not stop immediately he would call on the United Nations Security Council to meet in emergency session, perhaps Monday.

[Bunche suggested that the Jews and Arabs agree to a three-day "cooling-off period," meantime maintaining their positions. Bunche said he would withhold a call for a Security Council session until Israel replies. Bunche told Shertok the Egyptians had agreed to cease fire if the Israelis did. After talking with Shertok Bunche said he was "hopeful."]

Jewish Planes Active

A new Egyptian complaint received at U. N. headquarters in Haifa said the Jews had occupied new positions east of Faluja, thus blocking a highway approach from Gaza through Hebron to Jerusalem. Faluja is a communications center 23 miles northeast of Gaza.

Last night the recently strengthened Israeli air force lashed out for the third successive night against Gaza air base, the big Egyptian airfield El Arish near the

Parley Weighs Eire's Ending of Last Crown Ties

London, Oct. 17 (AP). — Prime Minister Attlee led a surprise conference of Commonwealth chieftains today to discuss settling grave problems connected with severance of the last ties between Eire and Britain.

A statement from Attlee's residence said "there was a general exchange of views on matters of common interest arising out of the declared intention of the Eire government to repeal the external relations act."

This act, passed in 1936, links Eire to Britain, even though Eire is in other ways an independent country. Under the law, Eire's diplomats abroad and foreign representatives in Dublin, are accredited through the British King.

The Irish were warned they would lose preferential trade and citizenship treatment by leaving the empire.

Sean MacBride, Eire Minister of External Affairs, and Patrick McGilligan, Eire Finance Minister, attended the conference.

6 Neutrals Study New Berlin Plan

Paris, Oct. 17 (AP).—The six neutral countries on the United Nations Security Council were reported working anew today on a plan for settling the Berlin crisis. Both Russia and the West were said to be showing interest in the new approach.

An authoritative source said the United States, Russia, Britain and France are following closely the private efforts of the six nations to iron out a proposal for simultaneous action.

This informant said they were working on a resolution along these lines:

1. Russia would lift the Berlin blockade.

2. Currency control under a four-power arrangement would become effective in Berlin, with Russian currency being used in the four zones of the city.

3. The four-power Council of Foreign Ministers would meet or would be called to meet later.

4. The moves would be taken simultaneously.

Dr. Juan A. Bramuglia of Argentina, acting council president, has arranged for a meeting Monday with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky.

There still is no firm indication whether a resolution actually will be presented to the Council at the next meeting Tuesday. The neutrals — Argentina, Colombia, Belgium, Canada, China and Syria —were said to want all available information before making a move.

Activity in the U. N. Assembly tomorrow will center around the 58-nation political committee where debate starts on a subcommittee resolution proposing that the U. N. instruct the five great powers and Canada to see if there is any basis for agreement on international atomic control.

Nehru and Vishinsky Confer on Indian Policy

Paris, Oct. 17 (AP).—Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru conferred today with Russia's Andrei Y. Vishinsky on the dominion's present and future foreign policy.

Few details were available from either Russian or Indian official sources.

The Indian leader's hour-long session with the Soviet deputy foreign minister took place at his own request and was held in the Russian Embassy.

Informed Indian sources said the primary purpose of Nehru's talk with Vishinsky was "to renew contact."

It was the first conference with a Soviet policy maker since he became prime minister of the dominion.

In particular, the sources said, Nehru probably sought to explain to Vishinsky the circumstances which led India recently to invade the former princely state of Hyderabad; the stand his government is taking in regard to its dispute with Pakistan over Kashmir; and also its viewpoint in the dispute it is having with South Africa over treatment of Indian nationals there.

French Named In Yugoslav Spy Charges

By Homer Bigart

Belgrade, Oct. 17 (NYHT).—The French Embassy is allegedly implicated in the spy trial of Andrija Loncharich, confessed personal agent of former King Peter, who entered Yugoslavia illegally several months ago to revive the Chetnik underground.

"Invisible" letters written in lemon juice by Loncharich were sent to King Peter via the French Embassy's diplomatic pouch, according to the state prosecutor.

Among the evidence submitted by the prosecutor was a piece of silk on which was typed a message allegedly signed with the King's own hand and addressed to any surviving Chetnik commanders whom Loncharich might find. King Peter now resides in London.

Loncharich stolidly admitted all charges against him. Unable to find any Chetniks, Loncharich, according to the prosecutor, sent false reports to King Peter and the "foreign espionage" saying he had made contact with underground elements; that the economic situation in Yugoslavia was extremely critical and that the country was preparing for war.

The political significance of this trial lies in the fact the Yugoslav government, despite the Tito-Cominform break, is as determined as ever to stamp out royalist and other right-wing diversionists.

Chiang Seen Framing Policy To Halt Sweep by Communists

Nanking, Oct. 17 (AP).—'A last-ditch" policy aimed at halting the Communist sweep across north China was believed in the making today as Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek conferred privately with Chinese government commanders in Peiping.

Widespread speculation ranged from abandonment of all Manchuria to a mere shakeup in the high command.

(The Communist radio announced two more victories. It said Chefoo, important government port on the Shantung coast, fell to Communist arms on Friday, and Lini, in southern Shantung, was taken last Tuesday. The government took Chefoo in a drive in 1947 to cut off the Communist arms traffic from Manchuria.)

(The Communist broadcast said the government now retains only Tsingtao—site of a United States naval base—and five lesser strong points in Shantung Province.)

Pro-government dispatches said the Communist captors of Tsinan had pushed 120 miles south and were attacking Tenchsien, only 55 miles north of Suchow, the government's chief remaining bastion in north-central China.

Another serious Communist threat flared 100 miles northeast of Nanking. Dispatches said the Communists were grouping forces in the Tungtai area and might attempt to cross the Yangtze.

On the Manchurian front, an American civilian pilot who flew over Chinhsien said the fighting there was "as bad as anything I ever saw in the Pacific Islands against the Japanese."

Polk's murder was planned by the Cominform and carried out by the Communist party of Greece in order to throw the blame of the murder to the right, thus defame Greece abroad and to stop the application of the Marshall Plan to Greece by a protest in the United States against Greece, and also to frustrate military aid to Greece."

The announcement was prepared by Justice Minister George Melas and Minister of Public Order Constantine Rentis.

Staktopoulos and his mother have been under arrest for the past two months. They will be tried in Salonika. The other two may be tried in absentia. Warrants have been issued for Mouzenides and Vasvanas.

All four face charges of conspiracy to murder Polk. In addition Monzenides and Vasvanas were charged with illegal possession of firearms and carrying arms. Under present Greek military law such possession alone is punishable by death.

Last week four Athens newspapers carried stories that the government would announce that Communists killed Polk.

Polk was reported to be trying to get an interview with Guerilla Leader Markos Vafiades when he was slain.

The official account did not vary much from the published reports.

This was the story, according to the official statement:

Polk, 34-year-old correspondent from Fort Worth, Tex., had expressed a desire to have an interview with Vafiades. Staktopoulos was designated by the Communists as the "contact" man to lure Polk into a boat in Salonika Bay on the pretext that he was being taken to see Vafiades.

On May 8 Polk got into the boat with Staktopoulos, Vasvanas and Mouzenides. His feet and hands were tied and he was blindfolded, apparently being told that he was not to see what route he would be taken for the interview.

Then Mouzenides whipped out a gun and shot Polk in the back of the head. Mouzenides then took Polk's identity card and a calendar from his pocket and gave them to Staktopoulos, who apparently had not been told that the murder had been planned.

The body was tossed into the water. It was not found until May 16.

Staktopoulos was taken back to Salonika. He had his mother mail Polk's identity card to police on May 11. Police found the handwriting on the envelope was that of the mother. After extensive questioning, Staktopoulos confessed.

The hunt for Polk's killers interested agencies outside the Greek government.

The Overseas Writers Committee engaged Gen. William J. Donovan, former head of the United States Office of Strategic Services, as special counsel and announced a $10,000 reward offer.

Funeral services for Polk were held in Athens on May 22. His young wife, a Greek subject, is in the United States, preparing for a journalistic career.

Other details in the case, according to the official announcement, included:

Mrs. Staktopoulos confessed addressing the envelope to the police at the request of her son, who has been a member of the Greek Communist party since 1944.

Staktopoulos said he was first called by a man named "Nikos" and told Polk was coming to Salonika. Staktopoulos was told to get in touch with Polk and give him "fresh instructions." Nikos had Polk contact Vasvanas and arrange a meeting on the fatal night.

Polk and Staktopoulos had dinner, with Polk eating lobster. Then they boarded the rowboat. Vasvanas rowed and Mouzenides tied Polk up and blinded him.

"Even blindfolded I would go where I must go, and now we proceed to our destination," Polk was quoted as saying.

Mouzenides went back to his seat in the boat and fired pointblank at Polk, who fell with a dying groan.

Staktopoulos said when he was let out of the boat: "I was afraid they would also kill me because such are the ways of the Communists. When they commit a crime, they do a second one to cover the first."

(In New York, the newsmen's commission to investigate the murder of George Polk said it welcomed "any step toward the solution of the Polk murder, but today's announcement constitutes an accusation, not a legal conviction of the killers.")

CBS Awaits Word From Its Own Men

New York, Oct. 17 (U.P.).—The Columbia Broadcasting System announced today it will not comment on the Greek government announcement that the murder of CBS Correspondent George Polk had been solved until it hears from its own men on the scene.

Winston Burdett, Rome correspondent of CBS and Gen. William J. Donovan, wartime head of the OSS and counsel for the Overseas Writers' Committee investigating the murder, both returned to Athens October 11. Thus far CBS has not received from either any comment on the announcement.

Lippmann Says Committee Keeping 'Open Mind'

Walter Lippmann, chairman of the Overseas Writers Committee investigating the George Polk murder, said in Washington that the group is "keeping an entirely open mind" on the Polk case.

Lippmann said:

"The committee's responsibility in accordance with the resolution of the Overseas Writers is to see whether a full and complete investigation into all the circumstances of the crime is being conducted.

"The committee will not be able to make that determination until the evidence has been tested in a court of law."

Dead Cats Used To Chart Currents

Athens, Greece, Oct. 17 (U.P.). The alleged murderers of George Polk were captured by a shy, bright-eyed sleuth who plotted the currents of Salonika harbor by throwing hundreds of dead cats into the bay.

The detective, Maj. Nicholas Mautschountis, five-feet tall and balding, haunted the waterfront for weeks in the disguise of a fisherman. He said more than 30,000 handwriting samples were examined in the Polk case. By charting the harbor currents with the aid of the dead cats, he was able to learn where the body of the murdered broadcaster had been thrown into the bay.

Greek Guerilla Radio Sees U. S. Plans Failing

London, Oct. 17 (AP).—The Greek guerilla radio, Free Greece, said today Secretary of State Marshall's visit to Athens "is a result of the complete failure of the Athens clique to realize American plans in Greece."

tion of the number of councilors of the Republic in each party."

There are several reasons for the Interior Ministry's caution. The first is the indirect nature of the election and the second is that such voting tends to follow personalities rather than party lines. In many places, the members of the municipal councils, in order to elect their favorite delegates, made contradictory alliances.

Although the upper house is primarily an advisory body, the De Gaullists hope to win enough seats there to block legislation passed by the coalition government and thus force new national elections for the lower house.

Anti-Red French Miners Ordered Back to Work

Paris, Oct. 17 (AP).—Henri Mailly, a non-Communist mine union official for north France, said tonight his followers had been ordered back to work in struck coal mines despite Communist opposition.

Mailly, who is president of the Workers' Force Union, said the order was issued both to his own organization and for the smaller Christian Federation.

The two non-Communist unions represent 20 per cent of the 200,000 miners who have been on strike for two weeks.

Mailly's announcement was the first real break in the ranks of the mine unions.

Peron Accession Celebrated by Argentine Labor

Buenos Aires, Oct. 17 (AP).—Organized labor and the Peronist Party celebrated today their biggest holiday, in the anniversary of the labor march that forced the release of Juan D. Peron from prison, and resulted in his election as president in 1946.

President Peron and his wife, Eva, addressed throngs in front of the presidential offices.

The Argentine General Labor Federation (CGT) called out all its members from normal Sunday work. Movies, racetracks, coffee shops, restaurants, cable and radio companies and transportation firms all closed.

Retail Store Spending Up

By the United Press

Retail stores, especially grocery, are getting more of the consumer's dollar than they did before the war, the Commerce Department said yesterday.

The Office of Business Economics estimated that about 129 billion dollars of the 185 billion dollars annual consumer income after taxes, is being spent in retail stores.

That means that about 69 per cent of the disposable income goes over retail counters, compared with about 60 per cent before the war, a department spokesman said.

The grocer gets about 17 per cent of the disposable income now, instead of 14 per cent. Women's wear stores get about 2.4 per cent compared with a prewar 1.8 per cent. Men's wear stores get about 1.3 per cent, about the same as prewar.

the "cold war" term in describing ECA's objective. His administration, he added, is attempting to prevent spread of the "seeds of communism, or totalitarianism of any kind, wherever possible."

Lapham then answered the question, saying he believed the program was "helping" to achieve ECA's objective.

Hoffman declined to elaborate on the European Recovery Program, saying:

"This is China Day. I told you about Europe on Friday."

At that time he told a news conference the European program was making such satisfactory progress that a cut in spending might be made next year. He refused to estimate how much could be trimmed off, but said the program needed $5,055,000,000 for its first year of operation.

ECA reported meantime in its weekly summary of allotments that $2,187,336,356 in aid has been authorized for all recovery nations through October 13. Grants announced on Thursday and Friday of last week bring the total to $2,206,659,602.

An Israeli spokesman said Israel apparently had control of the sky over the area of operations.

A government spokesman declared the purpose of the attack was to smash open and keep open the road to Jewish settlements in the Negev—the southern Palestine desert. If the Jews win full control they would cut the Egyptian supply and reinforcement route for much of southern Palestine.

Thus far Trans-Jordan, Iraq, Syria and Lebanon were inactive along the eastern and northern fronts.

Egyptians Claim Jews Suffered Heavy Losses

Cairo, Oct. 17 (U.P.).—An official Egyptian spokesman today said Egyptian artillery forced the retreat with heavy losses in men and material of Jews who attacked in the Negev with a large number of armored cars.

Egyptian planes attacked Israeli concentrations throughout the day, the spokesman said, and destroyed 10 armored cars and 10 trucks filled with troops.

The spokesman added that Egyptian planes, which "dominated the field of action," drove off Israeli planes and inflicted heavy losses in men and material in attacks on Jewish positions. A number of civilians were killed by Jewish bombs at Majdal, he said.

Big Three Differ On German State

Flies Airlift

Dulles Backs Firm Policy In Berlin

Berlin, Oct. 17 (AP).—John Foster Dulles indicated broadly today that he would support the United States firm policy against the Berlin blockade if the Republicans come into power.

The Republican Party's top adviser on foreign affairs praised the airlift and said the Berlin question is not one of partisan politics. Asked if there might be any change in Berlin policy after the elections in November, Dulles said all major questions of foreign policy are being kept out of partisan politics.

Dulles met newsmen briefly after flying the airlift route to Berlin as a climax to a quick tour of Germany.

In an earlier statement, he described the blockade as a threat to peace but in an obvious warning to the Russians said it could "contribute to the peace if it reminds some, who seem to have forgotten, that freedom has moral and material reserves that are unpredictable and immeasurable."

Dulles was understood to have been surprised and impressed by the recovery in western Germany. He had been reported unofficially previously to have felt that currency reform in western Germany would be unproductive and a diplomatic mistake. There were indications that if he actually held that view he has changed it.

Earlier differences between Dulles and Gen. Lucius D. Clay, the American military governor, were not apparent in their discussions of the last two days.

Before leaving for Paris to resume his work as a U. N. delegate, Dulles disagreed with President Truman's statement of yesterday that the Soviet attitude has been a little more conciliatory lately. Dulles said the Russians in the last 10 days in Paris have not altered their opinions or attitudes "visibly."

"I came to Berlin because I wanted to see at first hand the operation of the airlift," Dulles said. "The Soviets started here a coercive operation, doubtless hoping that starvation would break men's resistance and drive the western powers from their agreed position and subject another 2,225,000 people to Soviet rule.

"The results were, I surmise, not what the Soviet expected.

"Britain, France and the United States met the challenge, not by retreat, not by counterviolence, but by bringing into being an airlift so spectacular that all the world marveled.

"The morale in western Berlin and western Germany has risen to a new high.

"In the United States, despite a national election, bipartisan unity has been forged to meet external dangers. The Berlin affair has many deplorable aspects, and all who want peace will do their utmost to help the United Nations remove the threat to the peace that is inherent in the Soviet blockade.

"But what has happened will itself contribute to the peace if it reminds some who seem to have forgotten, that freedom has moral and material reserves that are unpredictable and immeasurable."

Berlin, Oct. 17 (AP).—France was reliably reported tonight to be opposing the United States and Britain on how much power should be given the new West German state.

The differences have shown up in the drafts of an occupation statute submitted by the three nations. France is understood to be unwilling to delegate as much power to the Germans as the other two. In addition, none of the three want to delegate as much power as the Germans want. German political figures have become increasingly restive and may try to force a showdown. They can refuse to go ahead with planning a constitution and setting up a West German government if they feel such a political setup would reduce them to little more than puppets. Such a stoppage would delight the Russians.

Under the tentative statute the occupation powers would retain direct control over foreign affairs, demilitarization and imports and exports. Supervisory control would be kept under democratization, education and cultural programs, denazification and police strength and powers.

It is understood the French want certain industries banned and Britain and the United States consider some of these economically essential. The French also oppose any central police forces and want to direct administrative controls over communications, post and telegraph and various features of democratization.

but wants more of them in actual training.

Military officials said meanwhile that the national defense budget for the next fiscal year probably will exceed the 15-billion-dollar ceiling set by President Truman if the international situation does not ease off. They look for armed forces budget of about 22 billion dollars by 1953 unless there is a business recession or tension between this country and Russia eases.

Officials said the fiscal 1950 defense budget, the first since unification of the armed services, will not be sumbitted to the Budget Bureau until late this year. The normal deadline is September 15, but officials are waiting until the last minute to see what, if anything, happens.

Single Men Favored

The Air Force emphasized that its enlistment appeal will not increase its strength in Europe since the men will be used solely as replacements. Those reenlisting will be offered grades "commensurate with their ability and military experience." Skills needed include aircraft maintenance, radio, radar, communications and automotive equipment operators and repairmen.

The Air Force is looking particularly for single men up to 34 years of age who have been discharged more than 90 days. Married men must qualify for grades of staff sergeant and technical sergeant to be accepted if they have been out for more than 90 days.

Unity Lessening European Fears, Austin Declares

New York, Oct. 17 (U.P.).—Warren C. Austin, chief United States delegate to the United Nations, said today that cooperative efforts for defense are stemming fear in western Europe.

Austin spoke by radio from Paris to launch the third annual United Nations Week. The slogan for the week is 'We can work it out together or fight it out alone."

"Unity is proving its power here in Europe as well as at home," Austin declared. "The day will come when the minority will see the value of sharing in the general good and will forsake their position of sterile isolation."

15 German Newsmen Visit D.C.; One Recalls 'Blind' Trip Here

The Washington Post

Felix Richter, editor and publisher of the Suddeutsche Allgemeine in Karlsruhe; Dr. Annemarie Langens, editor of the British licensed Telegraf of Berlin and Joachim Pabst (right), editor and publisher of the Nordwest Zeitung in Oldenburg pause to inspect leaflet during tour yesterday

There was one German newspaperman of the 15 touring the Washington area yesterday who was particularly glad to be able to see the points of interest from a sightseeing bus.

He was Felix Richter, editor and publisher of the Suddeutsche Allgemeine in Karlsruhe, who went through Washington once before in a bus, but didn't see anything of the city.

He didn't see anything because the bus, which was run by the Army, had all its windows well covered. It was late 1944, and Richter was a prisoner of war, captured by the United States Army in southern France.

"You can see I'm awfully glad to have the chance to see something of the city," he said as he stopped for lunch in Alexandria with the rest of the group, who will complete their two-day visit here tonight.

One Woman in Group

The newsmen—and newswomen, including Dr. Annemarie Langens, editor of the Telegraf of Berlin—are attending a seminar at the American Press Institute of Columbia University in New York. The four Washington newspapers arranged the visit, designed to acquaint the German group with the local press.

Richter, who said most of his 30 months as a PW were spent picking cotton near his camp at Ruston, La., explained that he was not allowed to write after 1938, when he was arrested and questioned by the Gestapo for anti-Nazi views.

His trip through Washington in 1944 took him to some camp outside the city—he still doesn't know where—to be questioned for military information. He boasts that he was probably the worst soldier in the German army, and that it took him some five years to become a pfc. He never fired his rifle at any one, he added.

As an anti-Nazi, he said, he was placed with others who felt the same way in the Louisiana camp, where there was no "Heil Hitler" saluting by the PWs.

Two Press Conferences

After an all-day tour of Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon, the group attended a cocktail party given by Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, widow of the Omaha Senator and publisher.

Their schedule today calls for a press conference with Howard Bruce, a deputy ECA administrator, at 9:30 a. m., followed by a luncheon at the National Press Club with Washington correspondents. A press conference will follow at 3 p.m. with Assistant Secretary of the Army Tracy Voorhees.

They will conclude their stay with a dinner at the Statler Hotel to be given by the Washington newspapers.

Czechs Ponder Forcing Labor

PRAGUE, Oct. 17 (NYHT).—Legislation to send persons who hamper Czechoslovakia's economy to forced labor camps was submitted to the Czech parliament this weekend.

The bill provides that Czechs between 18 and 60 years of age who are physically fit but shirk work will be paid an "adequate" wage for labor performed in the camps.

Russia to Pay With Rubles In Germany

Berlin, Oct. 17 (AP).—The Russians announced today that Russia is reducing German occupation costs under a new system by which they will pay their occupation forces 60 per cent in Soviet rubles instead of 100 per cent in German marks.

This step was about three years behind the Americans and British and considerably behind the French. The United States and Britain have been paying their occupation personnel, military and civilian, in dollar-backed and sterling-backed military payment certificates. The French pay theirs partly in an occupation franc and partly in German money.

The Russians also announced they would cut occupation costs further through a "considerable reduction in Soviet military administration personnel." The announcement referred only to military government personnel and not occupation troops.

German press dispatches said the Russians had ringed Berlin with police patrols to close loopholes in their blockade through which food from the surrounding Soviet occupation zone has been reaching western sectors of the city.

The police were charged with inspecting every train, barge, auto and every person entering Berlin to see they did not carry into the city foodstuffs or other rationed products. These articles were subject to confiscation.

West Europe Chiefs Confer On Arms Cost

Paris, Oct. 17 (U.P.).—The finance ministers of the five western European treaty nations met here for two and a half hours today to discuss financing their mutual defense program.

The closed session at the French Ministry of Finance was presided over by Premier Henri Queuille.

Officials said the ministers decided to leave it to the experts of the five nations to work out a detailed master plan.

The foreign ministers of the five nations will meet at the Western bloc consultative council in Paris October 25 and the suggestions approved today by the finance ministers will be submitted to them then.

Old Ilse Koch Charge Found

Nuernberg, Germany, Oct. 17 (U.P.).—Ilse Koch was regarded even by the Nazis as a woman of bad character who informed on her husband while carrying on love affairs with SS officers, an indictment showed today.

Both Ilse, and her husband, who was commandant of the Buchenwald camp, were indicted by the Nazis for profiting from stolen goods and money. She was never brought to trial, but her husband was convicted and executed.

The indictment against Ilse, prepared by an SS judge was found recently in war crimes files at Nuernberg. She was sentenced to life imprisonment by a war crimes court, but her sentence has been commuted to four years.

Ilse was pictured in the Nazi indictment as an unfaithful wife, who lived in luxury while leaving her aged mother in poverty.

It said she carried on love affairs simultaneously with Waldemar Hoven, a Nazi doctor, and a Col. Florstedt of the SS.

Franz Lehar Worse

Vienna, Oct. 17 (AP).—Franz Lehar's doctor said tonight the famous Austrian composer had suffered a relapse and is in "serious" condition. The 78-year-old Lehar, composer of "The Merry Widow" and a score of other operettas, is suffering from a heart ailment, complicated by a stomach ulcer.

South Korean Leftists Kill 4 Rightists, Wound Policeman

Seoul, Korea (Monday), Oct. 18 (AP).—Home Minister T. Y. Yoon today reported Korean leftists killed four rightists and wounded one policeman in night raids Saturday at Ulsan, southeastern Korea.

Yoon did not say so, but this may be the basis for a report by Russian official news organs yesterday of a "rebellion" at Taegu (Taikyu). Taegu is 35 miles northwest of Ulsan.

The Home Minister said four or five men armed with Japanese rifles staged the attacks. The attackers escaped.

The Russian report said the population of the city of Taegu (Taikyu) in south Korea had battled south Korea armed forces for 30 minutes. It said, "Many were killed and wounded and police made arrests."

Taegu has been the scene of more subversive activity and clashes with police than most of south Korea in the past. It is 145 miles by air southeast of Seoul.

Tokyo Koreans Cheer Soviet Message at Rally

Tokyo, Oct. 17 (AP).—Five thousand Koreans living in Tokyo rallied today and cheered a Russian message congratulating them on creation of the Soviet-sponsored north Korean government.

The message from Lieut. Gen. Kuzma Derevyanko, Soviet member of the four-powe council for Japan, was read by a Russian army officer in downtown Kyoritsu hall.

Four hundred Japanese police, armed with pistols or long sticks, were nearby, but the Koreans were orderly.

ator Chapman Revercomb, who balked at Governor Dewey's appeal that he take a more liberal stand on the displaced persons bill. The bill, as finally enacted, was denounced by President Truman as anti-Catholic and anti-Semitic.

Governor Dewey has made no effort as yet to help Revercomb in his tough battle with Matthew M. Neely, the Democratic nominee, nor is there any indication that he will do so in the two weeks remaining.

May Lose Chairmanships

If the Republicans should lose four seats, and not offset the loss by picking up Democratic seats, Governor Warren might find himself presiding over a Senate controlled by the political opposition. In such a case, Senator Arthur Vandenberg, who predicted here last night that Dewey would win the Presidency by 400 to 131 in the electoral college, would have to give up the chairmanship of the Foreign Relations Committee to Senator Tom Connally of Texas. The same thing would happen to GOP chairmen all along the line.

That would be very awkward for Governor Dewey, who has been stumping the land with a promise to bring "unity" and "teamwork" to Washington.

The Dewey people try to tell themselves that it can't happen in the face of a prospective Republican landslide, or they try to reassure themselves with the thought that they pick up a Democratic Senate seat in Montana or New Mexico or, perhaps, Tennessee.

Spots on House Picture

The House of Representatives picture also is bothersome in spots. Here in Michigan it looks as if the Democrats might recapture two seats which they lost in 1946. They are located in the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Congressional Districts, both in Detroit.

Representative Howard A. Coffin, the Republican incumbent in the Eighteenth District, is opposed this time by the Democrat he defeated two years ago, George D. O'Brien.

In the Fourteenth, Representative Harold F. Youngblood, Republican incumbent, is fighting it out all over again with Louis C. Rabaut, the former Democratic incumbent. A poll by the Detroit News showed recently that both Republican incumbents were trailing their Democratic rivals.

Last night, after Owosso had given Governor Dewey the "nicest party" of his life, Gov. Kim Sigler and other GOP leaders of Michigan besought him to come back this way before election day and put in a plug for Youngblood.

Governor Dewey said he would leave that up to Herbert Brownell, his campaign manager.

One other disturbing, but not necessarily alarming, political situation has to do with Henry Wallace and the farmers.

Republican stategists who have been boarding the "Dewey Victory Special" from time to time report that deserters from the Wallace ranks are lining up behind Mr. Truman in sizable numbers. Many of these, they say, are Negro voters.

In Oklahoma, Missouri and Minnesota, Governor Dewey was told that President Truman was making considerable headway with his charge that the GOP is not sincere in backing the parity and price-support program for agriculture."

It was for this reason that he went all out in his speech in St. Paul.

The talk here in Owosso today was largely about Senator Vandenberg's rousing speech at the welcome-home celebration for Governor Dewey last night. For the last several years, the Michigan statesman has refrained from old-fashioned political oratory. Even when he indorsed Dewey a week ago tonight, he went only so far as to say that the Nation's foreign policy would be in safe hands with the GOP standard-bearer.

But last night, Vandenberg, as they were saying today, "really went to town." He said that once Dewey took over the Presidency "the hates and howls and hubbubs of splinter government" would move out. And so, also, would "the red and the red herrings." Organized sanity would move in, he said, and teamwork would succeed confusion.

Rector Mentions Politics

It was the Vandenberg of prewar days talking, the old phrasemaker of Grand Rapids, who used to write editorials that day in and day out scorched the hide of the Democratic donkey.

Governor Dewey attended services today at the Christ Church, where he sang in the choir as a boy. With him were his mother, Mrs. George M. (Annie) Dewey, and his wife.

The Rev. William Dean Davis, rector, had published the following in today's church bulletin:

"This church has never indulged in partisan politics, but this visit of the Hon. Thomas E. Dewey has much more than mere political implications as far as the city of Owosso are concerned.

"Our people without regard to their political affiliations are bent on showing their pride in honoring a native son who by his ability and integrity has won the admiration of the American people.

Kin Enjoy Turkey Dinner

"According to the various polls and the political prophets, Governor Dewey will be chosen to receive the highest honor that this Nation can confer on any citizen. If that prophecy is fulfilled Owosso's distinguished son will be called to high honor and grave responsibility.

"We earnestly pray that God will guide, protect and bless him in any vocation to which he may be called."

After the church services, the Dewey family sat down to an old-fashioned Sunday dinner in the white frame house at 421 W. Olive st.

size of the crowds he has been drawing as he hammers away at his central theme: That the battle at the ballot box is between "the people" and "the special interests."

To Spend Night in Raleigh

The President and his party were scheduled to leave by plane at 6 a. m., today and arrive at Miami's international airport four hours later. He has accepted an invitation to a buffet luncheon at the Roney Plaza before his speech at 2 p. m.

His plane, the Independence, is to carry him to Raleigh this evening. He will spend the night there, delivering speeches Tuesday morning and afternoon. The first, historical in nature, will be at the dedication of a monument to three North Carolina-born Presidents—Jackson, Johnson and Polk. His afternoon speech at 3 p. m. at the State fair grounds, on farm problems, will be carried by an NBC regional hookup of 44 radio stations in 12 Southern States.

Mrs. Truman and Margaret joined the President in receiving the Missouri football squad at the entrance to the State dining room.

Nov. 2 Ballot Mixed Up by Democratic Split

By The Associated Press

The Democratic split has mixed up the November 2 election ballot. So several unusual things can happen.

Tennessee's electoral vote may be divided. It hasn't occurred anywhere in 36 years.

President Truman may not be on the ballot in Alabama. Party leaders cannot recall when one of the two big parties last missed being on a State ballot. Governor Folsom says he will ask the courts to put Truman electors on the ballot. States' Rights brought on the situation by taking over the State's regular Democratic organization.

The split in the South's Democratic vote could throw several States there to the Republicans for the first time in 20 years.

The States Rights Democrats themselves hope to capture up to 100 electoral votes. Their best chances are in Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina, where they are running with regular Democratic electors.

There are 11 presidential tickets in the field. Some of the seven minor party candidates may not appear on a single ballot.

For the first time in the memory of political historians, there will be four so-called "major" presidential tickets.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican candidate, will be on the ballot in all 48 States; President Truman, the Democrat, in 47; Henry A. Wallace, Progressive, in 45 (all except Illinois, Nebraska, and Oklahoma, according to his own estimates), and Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States' Rights, in 13.

Thurmond is on the ballot only in one State outside the South—North Dakota.

If Tennessee's electoral vote is split—and political experts there figure it will be—it will be the first time such a thing has happened where since 1912 when Theodore Roosevelt won 11 and Woodrow Wilson 2 of California's 13 electoral votes in a three-ticket field. Maryland divided her electoral votes in 1904 and 1908.

Dixiecrats Spurn Richmond Forum

Richmond, Va., Oct. 17 (AP).—Virginia States Rights Democrats did not take part here tonight in a local radio political forum sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. They said questions to be used were "discriminatory."

The spokesman, State Senator Frank S. Richeson, campaign director for the Thurmond-Wright supporters in Virginia, said questions suggested for the forum by his group were ignored in preparation of the program.

Georgetown Group Aroused by Alley Project

Owner Charged With Remodeling Without a Permit

Remodeling of a group of blind-alley garages has a fashionable Georgetown neighborhood on its ear.

The dispute, which in the past frate neighbors have taken to the District Building and The Hill, this week became a court affair when the owner was charged with making alterations (adding a stairway) without a permit.

Involved are: Lieut. Col. Lawrence I. Peak of 1721 Rhode Island ave. nw., who is remodeling the group of garages in the alley opening on 33d st. between O and P sts. nw.; the District Department of Inspections, which charges that Peak put a stairway into a garage in the rear of 3314 P st. without a permit; and residents of the neighborhood, who object to anyone living in the alley, and have told the District government so in no uncertain terms.

According to Deputy Director Ilgenfritz of the Department of Inspections, the dispute dates back to 1947 when complaints were made that the string of seven garages on the alley, including one large one, were in a "dilapidated condition" because of rotted joists and rafters, damaged doors and rats.

The Department of Inspections ordered the owner to make the place "safe" by replacing the damaged supports and cleaning the property.

Law Limits Use

This order dragged on, for various reasons, until July, 1947 when Peak said he was willing to make the repairs if water and sewer permits would be granted, so that he could use the property for residences, nonresidential studios or small shops.

The District's Alley Dwelling Act prohibits construction, alteration or conversion of any building for use as an alley dwelling, but does permit such use if it has been previously used, or was designed for use, of a home, Ilgenfritz explained.

The Department of Inspections found "substantial" evidence that the large garage in the string had been used in the past as a residence. The Police Department made a similar survey and found that the spot had once been a home, possibly for the servants of a former estate in the area.

Official Ruling

But, as complaints began to flow in from neighbors, the Department of Inspections asked the Corporation Counsel's office for an opinion on the matter. It concurred, so water and sewer permits were issued, and the matter was forgotten by officialdom.

Early this month, however, Peak was given a permit to cover the adjoining garage doorway with bricks and put windows and door in it. The permit was issued across the counter by a clerk who had not been aware of the previous lengthy negotiations, Ilgenfritz said.

Then things began to buzz around the Inspections Department, with neighbors telephoning and coming in to protest. An inspector was sent out and the unauthorized stairway spotted.

According to Peak, who says he is a veteran of both World Wars in inactive status, the first he knew of the charge was at dinner time Wednesday, when he was served a warrant.

Four Made Arrest

Four policemen arrested him, Peak complained, took him to No. 3 Precinct, made him post a $50 bond and told him to appear in court the following morning.

Pvt. H. J. Dudley, policeman on the beat who served the warrant, said he was accompanied by his "running partner" according to the Police Department rule that they travel together, when the warrant was served. At Peak's request, Dudley said, they waited until Peak finished dinner, then asked him if he wished to drive his car to the station.

Peak said they should furnish the transportation, Dudley said, so he called a scout car. Through some muddle, the scout car, with its complement of two men, came with its siren screaming. "It was humiliating to us both," Dudley said.

Peak says the whole case "has been handled in a very high handed and arbitrary manner. I see no reason why I should be treated in this fashion when I had no direct contact with the job. I had a contract with a contractor, Joseph Baker, who secured the permit. If there is any flaw in it he should have been contacted.

Solution Rejected

"My contract provides for a stairway. There was a ladder going up there before. Anyone knows you can't get from the first to the second floor without a stairway. I suggested in court that the permit be amended, if need be, but they said it couldn't be done when the case is in court."

The case has been continued until Thursday.

Peak says he has been "harassed from anonymous sources" ever since he bought the property, and thinks "pressure is being brought to bear from somewhere."

Ilgenfritz, asked if it wouldn't have been simpler to have told Peak to get a permit for the stairway, rather than take the case to court, said, "we don't have time to plead with people. Ignorance of the law is no excuse. This is just one case in a million.

Unfamiliar with the story and bewildered by the neighbors' interest in the remodeling going on in the garage next to her is Mrs. Thomas E. Goldstein, of 3316 P st. nw. (rear). She and her husband, who is employed by the State Department, rent the one unit completed by Peak and are "perfectly satisfied."

Long-Range View

Neighbors fear that over a period of time the other garages may be used as residences.

They say their objections are twofold: first, that to have persons living in the crooked alleyway constitutes a fire hazard and second, that when the housing situation improves it will be harder to rent the property there and undesirable persons may move in, lowering property values.

A leader of the opposition to Peak's remodeling is Mrs. George F. Becker of 1416 33d st., who says she took it up "when he started the first one. I took it to the Commissioners and to the Senate District Committee. I did everything under the sun."

Edward F. Habner, of 1418 33d st., a builder for 39 years, says "these people around here are all nice people. They don't want any alley rats to go in there. This will come to a showdown and be carried to the Supreme Court if necessary."

Habner is among those who say that the structures were originally stables and that while servants may have slept in the lofts, and in more recent years an elderly man occasionally did, they were never regular dwellings.

They say their use now as dwellings woul be a violation of Title I, Section 1, of the District Building Code and Section IV of the Alley Authority Act, which are designed to eliminate alley dwellings.

REMODELING CAUSES DISPUTE—Remodeling of this group of garages in a Georgetown blind alley opening on 33d st. between O and P sts. nw. has aroused the ire of neighbors who fear the owner, Lieut. Col. Lawrence I. Peak, of 1721 Rhode Island ave. nw., is going to convert them into dwellings. It has also brought Peak into court on a charge by the District Department of Inspections that he put a stairway in the unit, into which the bystander is looking, without a permit. Unit in the background, only one completed by Peak, is occupied

STEPS TO TROUBLE—Installation of this stairway, spotted by an inspector, was not covered by building permit for remodeling issued to Lieut. Col. Lawrence I. Peak, the District Department of Inspections says

Student Exchange Group Meets Here

Educational exchanges between the United States and the iron curtain countries of Europe will be studied by the United States Advisory Commission on Educational Exchange when it meets here today.

The commission, whose chairman is Chancellor Harvie Branscomb of Vanderbilt University, plans to give "exhaustive study" to the large aspects of this problem.

Branscomb has indicated that commission members favor an open-door policy for the United States on intellectual exchange.

As part of this general policy, however, the commission must decide whether students and teachers of Communist-dominated countries where "thought police" are at work, should be exchanged for American students and teachers.

Another phase of the problem is a decision as to permitting teachers and studentts from Communist-dominated countries now in the United States to remain here as political refugees.

The Educational Exchange Commisison, which is under the top direction of Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs George V. Allen, will meet today and tomorrow.

Members, in addition to Branscomb, are Mark Starr, educational director of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; Harold Willis Dodds, president of Princeton University; Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Martin R. P. McGuire, a professor at Catholic University.

Editor of GWU Paper Finds His Ex-Commander on Staff

MAJ. O. V. BERGREN

JOHN B. MINNICK

ROSENBERG JOHNSON COLLET

The Washington Post

When Second Lieut. John B. Minnick, USMCR, was training at Camp Elliott, San Diego, in 1943 to go overseas, his company commander was Major Orville V. Bergren, USMC.

Yesterday Minnick—now a retired Marine captain, following the loss of an arm at Iwo Jima—became editor of the George Washington University Law Review. On his staff is Major Bergren.

Despite the change in relationship between the two Marines, indications are that the two men will get along fine.

Each Praises the Other

Of the man who will work under him in getting out the law publication, Minnick said yesterday: "One of the finest men I ever worked under."

Of the man he will work under, Major Bergren said: "My outstanding officer."

Minnick, who lives at 1142 N. Illinois st., Arlington, Va., was named from a student body of about 1500 at the law school. Now 35, he studies with the aid of an electric typewriter furnished by the Veterans Administration and designed for one-hand operation.

A graduate of Amherst College, where he was a track star and editor of the student publication, he enlisted in January, 1942. After serving at Bougainville, Guam and Iwo Jima, and two years' convalescence, he was retired in November, 1946. He is married and has three daughters.

Last Met in Pacific

Minnick, who had last seen Major Bergren on Guadalcanal, didn't know his former company commander was at the law school until after he began his classes, a year after the major entered the school. A Marine since 1940, Major Bergren, who is 30, is one of several officers assigned to law studies at G. W. and Georgetown University by the Navy Judge Advocate General's office.

Editorial executive secretary of the Law Review will be Olin B. Johnson, while William A. Collet will handle editorial notices. Seymour M. Rosenberg will edit recent case notes.

Others on the staff are Donald A. Campbell, 3600 38th ave., Hyattsville; John E. Cavanaugh, 3759 Minnesota ave. se.; Wiliam F. Hyer, 4000 Cathedral ave. nw.; Joseph B. Kennedy, jr, 1100 S. Court House rd., Arlington; Donald K. King, 3012 Gainesville rd. se., and Charles H. Leclaire, 5641 N. Four Mile Run dr., Arlington.

Postal Kickback Charges Probed By House GOP

A double-barrelled investigation is under way into charges that Michigan Democrats have demanded campaign kickbacks from postmaster.

The Special House Committee on Campaign Expenditures, headed by Representative Ross Rizley (R., Okla.) disclosed yesterday that it has a "sizable" staff in Michigan conducting an inquiry. Chairman Edward Rees (R., Kans.) announced Friday that his House Postoffice and Civil Service Committee also will make an investigation.

Rees said Representative Harold Youngblood (R., Mich.), a committee member now in Detroit, had telegraphed him that he had "definite information" to back up the allegations.

Experts Declare U. S. Must Prosper To Help World

By The Associated Press

The Foreign Policy Association said yesterday the greatest contribution this country can make to world recovery is to stay prosperous itself.

It said in a report that sustained U. S. prosperity would keep up the flow of savings, "a part of which will be available for financing overseas."

The report, entitled "Problems of Underdeveloped Countries," was prepared by Dr. Harold H. Hutcheson, formerly an economist on the association's research staff, now on the faculty of Virginia Military Institute.

He said that if there is an economic slump in this country followed by "chronic stagnation, as in the period from 1929 to 1939, the volume of capital for export is likely to be exceedingly small."

Elissa Landi Rallies

Kingston, N. Y., Oct. 17 (U.P.) Elissa Landi, 44, former stage and screen star, rallied sufficiently today to talk with members of her family, after suffering "a flareup of a chronic condition," her physician said.

Sen. Wagner Called Victim of Amnesia

New York, Oct. 17 (NYHT).—Senator Robert F. Wagner was said by his son, Robert F. Wagner, jr., to be "all right" today and apparently suffering no ill effects from his 12-hour disappearance late Saturday which resulted in a general police alarm.

The younger Wagner, who is chairman of the New York City Planning Commission, said his father had an attack of amnesia, which proved temporary and was "clarifying itself" today.

The 71-year-old Democratic Senator, who has been ill for more than two years, left his son's summer residence at Islip, Long Island, at about 3 p. m. Saturday without notifying anyone. The Senator was found at 2 a. m. today eating a sandwich at Hans Jaeger's, a Manhattan restaurant.

Police called his son, who drove in from Islip and took the Senator back.

"Father slept through the morning," Wagner said tonight. "This afternoon Dr. William Carhart, who had been seeing him about once every three weeks examined him. He reported that his blood pressure was lower than it had been in months, and his pulse was fine.

"The doctor said the attack of amnesia would be all cleared up in a few days."

The physician quoted Wagner as saying he "couldn't understand why everyone else was upset about" his disappearance. The physician said the Senator had suffered a "temporary amnesia" but that he was "none the worse for his little jaunt into the city."

The CIO News disclosed, meantime, that Senator Wagner has been chosen for the Philip Murray award of the national CIO Community Services Committee. Last year the award went to Gen. Omar Bradley, then head of the Veterans Administration.

The News said the award will be in the form of a scroll and a check for $10,000, which will establish the Robert F. Wagner scholarship for students in the field of labor and social service.

President Truman will be the chief speaker at the award dinner in New York City October 28.

War Peak Passes

Divorce Rate Trend Still Downward

By the United Press

The postwar divorce boom appears to be over.

A survey showed yesterday that although marriages still are cracking up at a rapid pace, faster than before the war, the rate has been dropping steadily since it hit an all-time high in 1946.

Officials willing to interpret the trend said the primary cause was a "readjustment" to civilian life of World War II veterans who married hastily before going overseas.

Many of them shook off their brides on returning home during the 1946 peak period, they said. Others who might have gone to divorce courts reconsidered and are living up to their "I do" pledge.

Statistics obtained from the United States Public Health Service and court clerks across the country trace a steady drop in divorces during the past two years.

The Federal agency figures show a 25 per cent decline during 1947—from the record 610,000 in 1946 to 471,000 last year. On a per capita basis, there were 3.3 divorces for every 1000 persons last year to 4.3 in the previous year.

A spot check of court records showed the trend is continuing this year.

The Public Heauth Service emphasized that the divorce rate is still well above the prewar period. The 1941 total for the Nation was only 293,000. This jumped to 321,000 in 1942, the first full year of war, to 359,000 in 1943, 400,000 in 1944 and 502,000 the following year.

1,445,370 Deaths in 1947, 2d Lowest Rate Recorded

The Federal Security Agency reported yesterday that 1,445,370 Americans died in 1947, an increase of 49,753 over 1946, but still the second lowest rate ever recorded.

The National Office of Vital Statistics said the 1947 rate was 10.1 deaths for each 1000 persons. The record low 1946 rate was 10 per 1000.

Four States—Connecticut, Maine, New Mexico and Washington—reported fewer deaths in 1947.

Home Show Has 15,000 On 2d Day

About 15,000 persons turned out yesterday for the second day of the mammoth Home Show at the National Guard Armory, 19th and E. Capitol sts.

From 1 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. they popped questions at attendants in the 150-odd booths, gazed longingly at countless modern, labor-saving home accessories, or just wandered up and down the lines of colorful exhibits—lines as long as a football field.

The two-acre drill hall is the scene for the second year of the National Capital Home Show Exposition, under sponsorship of the Homebuilders Association of Metropolitan Washington. It will run through October 24, daily and Sunday, from 1 to 10:30 p. m., with admission of 80 cents for adults.

One popular exhibit was a do-it-yourself plastic tile. According to an exhibit spokesman, a room can be easily tiled by a homeowner, simply by applying cement to the walls and sticking the lightweight tile to it.

The thousands of visitors enjoyed themselves at various prize-winning games some booths offered. The "Roving Quizzer" again paid off in merchandise to the person who answered his questions correctly.

At 4 p. m. and again at 10 p. m., semifinalists in the Home Show Queen contest stepped on to a little stage in the center of the hall to be judged by the audience. To the woman chosen Queen on October 24 will go a furnished, all-aluminum vacation cottage worth more than $3500.

Of yesterday's 16 semifinalists, the audience applauded most in the afternoon for Mrs. Nadine Shrumm, 23, of 712 N. Monroe st., Arlington. Winner of the evening contest was Mrs. Virginia Davis, 35-year-old mother of seven, who lives at 4501 Emerson st., Hyattsville.

At 7 p. m. today the first 500 women to enter the Armory will receive Princess Aloha orchids, flown here from Hawaii by United Airlines. Another 500 will receive them at 7 p. m. Wednesday.

A 65-year-old Pentagon electrician was burned yesterday when a stove on which he was melting lead for fishing sinkers exploded, spraying him with molten metal.

Short

Herbert Short of 23 Strathmore ave., Garrett Park, Md., suffered burns of the face and hands, loss of part of his right thumb and ring finger, and a compound fracture of the left arm when he dropped water or gasoline on the hot stove.

Members of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad, who took Short to the Suburban Hospital, said he first attempted to melt the lead on a portable stove in his yard by using a blow torch. When this failed he built a wood fire in the stove. Then, they said, he either spilled water used to cool the lead or gasoline from the blow torch on the stove causing it to explode.

His wife, Mrs. Carrie Short, who was working in a flower bed 20 feet away, was struck on the ankle by a piece of the stove but not badly hurt.

Hospital officials said last night that Short was in a critical condition and had been given blood transfusions.

Gasoline Fire Burns Boy, 4

Four-year-old David Morton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Morton of Boyd, Md., was burned on the face and hands yesterday when he threw gasoline on a dairy boiler used to serilize milk cans.

David, who lives with his parents on the farm of W. W. Hodges in Boyd, was playing in the milk house while his older brother washed milk cans. He picked up a can of gasoline used to start fires in the boiler and dumped it on.

Montgomery County police met David and his father at Hunting Hill, Md., and brought the boy to the Rockville fire house for emergency first aid. He was later taken to Suburban Hospital, where his condition is serious but not critical.

Junior Police At Cathedral

More than 1000 boys and girls from 2 to 18 years old, some of whom had never been to church, yesterday attended evensong services at Washington Cathedral.

The children are members of the Junior Police and Citizens Corps of Washington. They were invited by cathedral officials, and the service was especially prepared for them.

The cathedral visit was the highlight of a religious program planned by children themselves. Each year the corps sponsors trips to local churches.

Officer Oliver Cowan, executive secretary of the corps, said yesterday that transportation to the service was provided by volunteer groups. These included Atwood and Sightseeing Inc. bus companies, the Reed Cross Motor Corps, several cab companies and many individuals.

Anti-U. S. Ship Policy Probed

By the United Press

The Martime Commission is investigating charges that Latin-American nations are discriminating against United States shipping, it was revealed yesterday.

The inquiry coincides with action on two other fronts to keep the United States in the front rank in international trade. For the first time since 1942, United States ships are carrying less than 50 per cent of the Nation's foreign commerce.

Besides tackling the reported difficulties with Latin-American countries, the Government and industry are taking these steps:

1. The Economic Cooperation Administration is insisting that European aid recipients permit United States shipping companies to transport half the Marshall Plan aid cargoes from this country.

2. The national federation of American shipping has requested the Army to defer action on proposals for rebuilding the Japanese merchant fleet to its 1930-34 level of four million gross tons.

The Latin-American countries specifically singled out are Argentina, Brazil, Colombia and Ecuador.

Report Shows Fall Pickup in Business

By The Associated Press

The Commerce Department reported last night that business picked up nicely as it moved into the fall season, giving promise of a "sustained high aggregate volume."

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics recently forecast that foreign aid and defense spending assure high level activity until mid 1949 at least.

The Commerce Department review of the current situation described price trends as "more mixed than in the preceding months—with industrial prices higher and agricultural prices easing as the harvests were gathered."

The department said prices continued to advance in September for "a broad but not pervasive list of manufactured goods." It made this distinction:

"In those industries—such as textiles, leather and shoes—where demand backlogs are largely satisfied, prices have not risen as much as the average for the nonfarm, nonfood group."

The department's analysis, prepared for the October edition of its monthly survey of current business, gave these highlights of the economic situation:

Personal incomes reached a record high annual rate of $215,000,000,000 in August, reflecting for the most part higher wage payments. Higher incomes and lower withholding taxes laid the basis for "a continued rise in consumer spending."

Industrial production picked up in August and September from the seasonable slump in July. More than seasonal gains were credited in output of steel, lumber, textiles tobacco, paper and industrial chemicals.

A greater abundance of raw materials accounts for the gradual rise in industrial output this year. "Nevertheless, basic supplies, especially of steel, continue to be a limiting factor in some industries . . ."

Business spending on new plant and equipment, an economic booster, amounted to almost $5,000,000,000 in the third quarter of the year, sustaining the early year pace. The value of new construction in September was up 25 per cent from last year.

Employment held high, reflecting "sustained demand for the Nation's products," while "the proportion of the labor force unemployed (about 2,000,000) was never lower than at present."

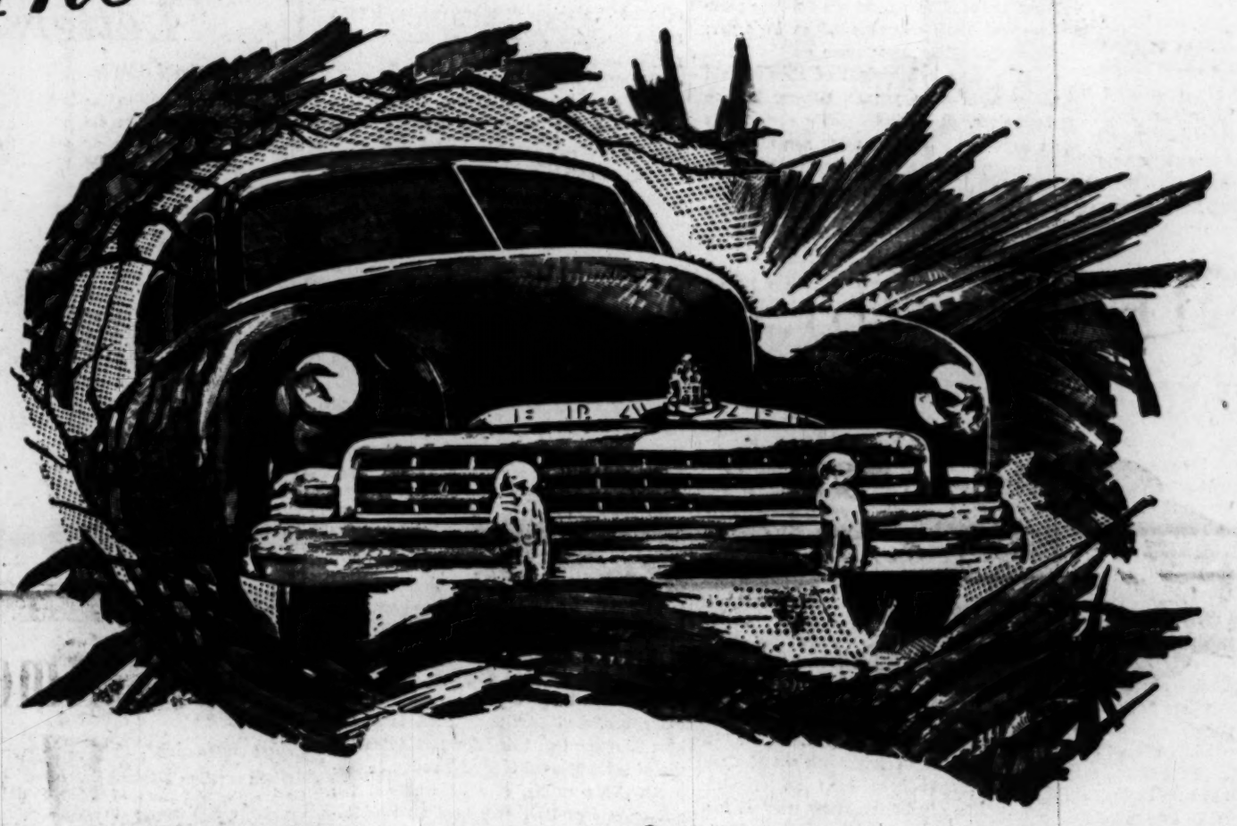
The 1949 FRAZER

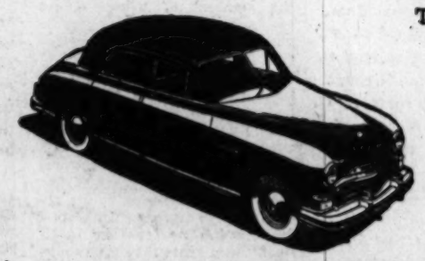


Trailblazer—of cars to come!

Once in a blue moon the stylists and engineers outdo themselves. They create a car that goes beyond today and sets the pattern for cars of the future.

This is what they have done with the FRAZER for 1949!

Low, sleek and differently handsome it is the trailblazer in style of cars to come. Its exclusive, colors and fabrics have made the world's leading fashion designers fall in love with it. They call it "the dream car".



The same car, the FRAZER for 1949, has even won the hard-to-win hearts of the test drivers who must relentlessly punish a car mile after mile for weeks on end. They say the Frazer makes such driving no punishment for them. Its driving ease and riding comfort "make 600 miles a day a breeze," they say.

There's a thrill waiting for you at your dealer's tomorrow. With 100 new features; improvements and refinements, the 1949 FRAZER is ahead of its time . . . out front—trailblazing the way for all the cars to come. First to break clean and scrap tradition, the cars from Willow Run have done it again. Because unlike other "new" cars built since the war, they've road-proved their dependability—2 billion miles worth! Value-proved to a quarter-million justly proud owners. See and drive the new FRAZER Tuesday! It's at your dealer's. Kaiser-Frazer Corporation, Willow Run, Michigan.

Last Straw

Georgia has piled what may well become a last straw upon our obsolete electoral machinery. Someone in Atlanta has dug up an ancient State law which provides that if no group of candidates for presidential and vice presidential elector receives a majority of the votes, the Legislature must meet in special session to choose the electors. The result, of course, would be to take the casting of Georgia's electoral votes in the presidential contest entirely out of the hands of the people.

No one need be surprised at this. For many years scholars have been telling the people that in casting their votes for presidential candidates they are exercising a privilege that is nowhere safeguarded in the Constitution. On the contrary, the Constitution leaves the States free to "appoint" their presidential electors as they see fit. We only hope that the Legislature in Georgia will again take over the function that the Constitution assigns to it. The resulting outcry might serve to wake the country up to the urgent need for modernizing the system by which our Presidents and Vice Presidents are elected.

Control Of The Senate

The apathetic feeling among voters toward the presidential campaigns seems not to have touched the senatorial contests that will have such a vital bearing upon either a Truman or a Dewey Administration. In at least 10 of the States where Senators are to be elected spirited campaigns are in progress, and control of the Senate still seems to be teetering in the balance. Even a Dewey landslide might not carry with it sufficient votes to assure Republican control of the Senate. That outlook clearly indicates why both the major candidates are giving so much time to the States where hot senatorial contests are being waged.

Even if the Republicans should win all of the senatorial seats at stake in the 20 States in which the Gallup Poll shows Mr. Dewey to have a large lead, it may not be able to hold its own in the Senate, and there are many reasons why Republican senatorial candidates in some States may lag behind the standard-bearer. In Illinois, for example, the isolationist Senator Brooks is running against a popular liberal Democrat, Paul H. Douglas. In Iowa, Senator Wilson is running against a strong contender in former Senator Gillette, who was elected in 1938 in spite of President Roosevelt's efforts to purge him for voting against the Supreme Court packing bill. In Wyoming, Governor Hunt is making a formidable race against Senator Robertson. The question in Colorado is whether Governor Dewey's substantial lead will be sufficient to carry the GOP candidate, W. F. Nicholson, into office over the strongly entrenched Senator Johnson.

The Democrats are extremely fortunate in having only four seats to be filled in States that are in any degree uncertain. Unless Congressman Kefauver in Tennessee, former Secretary of Agriculture Anderson in New Mexico and Senator Murray in Montana are much weaker than President Truman, the Gallup Poll figures give them very good chances of winning their contests. That would leave only one Democratic seat—that of Johnson of Colorado—in danger. In Oklahoma, President Truman's strong lead may be sufficient to snatch a senatorship away from the Republicans. Minnesota, according to Dr. Gallup, is dividing her support equally between Messrs. Dewey and Truman, and that fact seems to weigh heavily in favor of Minneapolis' Mayor, H. H. Humphrey, as against Senator Ball. With Mr. Truman getting 49 per cent of Kentucky's vote in the poll, against 40 per cent for Governor Dewey, Senator Cooper seems to be in very real danger of losing his seat to Virgil Chapman, the Democratic contender. Mr. Dewey has a strong lead in West Virginia but is giving no help to GOP Senator Revercomb because of the latter's refusal to democratize the displaced persons bill.

In the absence of abnormal scratching of ballots, the Gallup figures suggest that the Republicans may gain one Senate seat and lose three—a net loss of two. That would leave Mr. Dewey, if he wins the Presidency, with a Senate composed of 49 Republicans and 47 Democrats, by no means a happy outlook. And of course the special factors previously mentioned may result in a GOP minority. In the face of this situation Governor Dewey's overtures to Republican Leader Halleck in the House and his frequent emphasis on the necessity for cooperation between the President and Congress should occasion no surprise.

Europe Meets The Test

Marshall Europe is at last a reality. At the ceremony in Paris on Saturday the 16 European nations formally adopted and transferred to ECA two agreements constituting the basis for a community of economic Europe. One was the allocation as among them of aid receivable under the Marshall Plan for the year ending mid-1949. The other was a pledge on interpayments or a system of mutual assistance—a sort of Marshall Plan within the Marshall Plan. The achievement is impressive. It represents the triumph of six months of American pressure and of much soul-searching and mental labor by the Europeans themselves.

This is the real start of the ERP as it was conceived in Washington. Why were the Americans anxious to see the job of allocation done by the European nations? For a very simple reason. Allocation by Mr. Hoffman and his aides would not have advanced the declared goal of a working economy for Europe—declared by Mr. Marshall himself in his famous Harvard pronouncement of June 5 last year. On the contrary, it would have created rivalries and fomented jealousies, adding, in other words, to the divisiveness which is the bane of Europe. It is this separatism, this economic nationalism, this fragmentation that America wishes to cure through the majestic instrumentality of the Marshall Plan. Thus the only possible way to start the march to Marshall's goal was the assumption of responsibility for allocations by the Europeans themselves.

What made the demonstration the more striking was the way the Europeans underwrote their resolve. The economic set-up of Europe varies from country to country. Some are creditors; some are debtors; some have put their domestic house in order; some are still laggard; some on their own could become independent of Marshall aid well within four years. Others, left to themselves, would be chronic mendicants on Saturday. The less weak agreed to let the weak lean on them—on the premise that they must all sink or swim together. This is why the payments agreement is called an inside Marshall Plan. To illustrate, the British in round figures will get a billion and a quarter dollars aid by mid-1949 but will themselves contribute over $250,000,000 to their neighbors and will repay another $250,000,000 of their indebtedness. Belgium is the next important contributor.

The new covenants will provide a powerful spur to the restoration of intra-European trade which has been languishing as the result of the wartime shattering of the fabric of economic Europe. The delegates recognized the historic step they were taking in recovery and reconstruction, but there was no self-satisfaction. What they realized was that they had overcome the great and seemingly impassable hurdle standing in the way of real cooperation. What they knew was that they had saved themselves from a situation which would have turned them into chafferers for Marshall aid. Prodding, as Governor Dewey would say, did it. It made a community organization out of what otherwise would have been an oriental bazaar. There had been many excuses for avoiding the issue, particularly by the British who felt that the pace was too fast and thought that a year of experimentation with American allocation would be preferable. Yet there were no regrets to be heard at the Chateau de la Muette. The feeling was one of profound relief—and determination to press forward now that the big barrier had been overcome and mutual responsibility established.

On the very same day that these decisions were signed, sealed and delivered the organization for European cooperation—that is to say the counterpart in Europe of the ECA in Washington—decided to take stock of its own organization and to see how it can be improved. Clearly there is room for improvement. The OEEC lacked authority. It is not representative of policy-makers. As a result of the great step that was taken Saturday in recognizing a community of interest the body may have to be reshuffled, and there is a prospect that the Administration which leaped on Saturday into a new significance will be headed by men empowered both to readapt their national economies for the purpose of carrying out the present pledges and to do their own mutual prodding. If nations are willing to make sacrifices for others, they will insist that those sacrifices shall not be invalidated by slow pokes or recalcitrants. There would have been no such desire to build up a real organization for economic Europe, no such reach for incentive without this preliminary act both of organization and of faith within earshot of the East-West wrangling in the United Nations. Paris looked like a city of light on Saturday.

Innocent Abroad

There is an unhappy similarity between the impressions of Europe reported by Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., and those garnered a year ago by Representative John Taber. Both sets seem slightly inverted. Mr. Taber, it will be recalled, observed that he did not see any hungry people at a time when hunger was widespread. Now Mr. Vanderbilt has returned with the dismaying assertion that he had gone to Europe "an internationalist" and had come home "almost an isolationist, certainly a nationalist." The reason, it develops, is that the only people Mr. Vanderbilt found who like the Americans are the Swiss. "Most everybody in Europe said the Marshall Plan is a great aid to the American economy," he told an audience in Silver Spring last week. "No one there appreciates what we are doing for them."

It would be interesting to know whether Mr. Vanderbilt's sweeping generalizations about the attitude of the people of Europe have more foundation than his comments on the Marshall Plan in the Netherlands. "They (the Dutch) didn't need vegetables," he charged, "but Uncle Sam was sending them boatload after boatload of vegetables—and that is the story of the Marshall Plan all over Europe." The fact is, according to the Department of Commerce, that not one single vegetable was sent from this country to the Netherlands under Marshall Plan authorization between April 3 and September 10. The Dutch did purchase 163 short tons of vegetables from us—a mighty small boatload—between April and July, but these were not financed by the European Cooperation Administration.

It is not surprising, though, that Mr. Vanderbilt has received contrary impressions. In spreading the canard that the United States is foisting its surpluses on Europe, Mr. Vanderbilt has bitten off a large chunk of the Communist line, which continually misrepresents the functions of ECA. The truth is that the participating countries decide on their own requirements, and ECA merely authorizes purchases where they can best be made. All this goes to show that people who do not understand the Marshall Plan have no business lecturing about it.

Trouble In Paradise

The once model Maryland community of Greenbelt seems to contain no neutrals these days. A large number of Greenbelt's 8000 tenants are engaged in an almost personal feud with their absentee landlord, the Public Housing Administration, over a projected rent increase and the question of obtaining land for local churches and schools. To many of these residents PHA seems to have assumed the sinister proportions of an ogre.

Objectively it is difficult to determine whether the 16 per cent average rent increase asked by PHA is justified. The housing agency asserts that it is under compulsion to obtain the highest proper return commensurate with the general rent level of the area. The fact that Greenbelt technically is in the black has little bearing upon the proper rent to be charged, it points out, because Greenbelt was built as a public works project and amortization is not considered. For their part, residents assert that the basis for rent comparison was Naylor Gardens, a development substantially closer to downtown Washington than is Greenbelt. Moreover, they insist that maintenance at Greenbelt is extremely poor, and that operating costs have not risen in proportion to the rent hike PHA wants.

With respect to a site for the armory, residents are aroused because money for construction of the building itself already is in hand. PHA maintains, however, that it cannot legally transfer land to the State of Maryland for this purpose. The same consideration governs churches, which for the most part are now using schools and other borrowed facilities. PHA is bound by a Supreme Court decision forbidding the use of tax-supported lands for religious purposes. This ruling, it says, prevents the gift or sale of land at a nominal sum, although church members assert that PHA has sold land at low prices in other developments for this purpose.

Greenbelt tenants are not a low-income group entitled to Federal rent subsidies. Nevertheless, it seems to us, there is considerable evidence of straining at gnats on the part of PHA. Irrespective of the basis of comparison with other projects, a rent increase of the percentage asked flies in the face of the Rent Control Act, which recognizes increases as justified only when they are supportable by demonstrated increases in cost. Furthermore, the National Guard is a public function, and it is hard to see why, if PHA has authority to give land to a community for public purposes, it cannot do so for an armory. As to the controversy over land for churches, might there not be a solution in zoning action by the community restricting the plots in question to religious use, after which PHA could receive bids?

There have been accusations that PHA, acting under a congressional mandate to dispose of Greenbelt, is attempting to curry favor by discounting the interests of the tenants. As long as Greenbelt remains a Federal project, PHA has a responsibility to the residents as well as to the public. Greenbelt, of all places, ought to be the home of cooperation. This calls for less hypersensitivity on the part of the tenants and less bureaucratic aloofness on the part of their Federal landlord.

MOZART: SYMPHONY IN E-FLAT MAJOR

Tonight from a long-vanished summer, from a bright season lost,
Came this remembrance on a tide of sound,
And I was moved to wonder: "Were they days
Of placid sunlight and deep shadow? Did the wind
Move gently over dreaming fields at noon?
Or were there storms and rushing surf of clouds and drifts of rain?"

I should say sunlight, rather, having heard
Your heavenly laughter, Mozart, in a night
Of ominous winter, having sat entranced
To hear you speak tonight across the gulf of years
That lie between your joy and ours, between your grief
So splendidly put by and ours held back a while
By this, your deathless magic, whereby time
Is cozened of his prey, death is foiled.

Dr. Hrdlicka's Work

It seems that, due to the fact that Dr. Alec Hrdlicka did not know how to draw up a proper will, the republication of his anthropological studies may be impossible, according to an article in your issue of October 12. This is unfortunate.

Dr. Hrdlicka was not only a great man and a profound thinker as stated in this article, but also he possessed the rare gift of intellectual integrity. H. drew honest conclusions from his findings. He did not begin with his conclusions as seems to be the custom today, selecting only the facts which tend to prove a point.

His work adds to the knowledge of the world. I shall never forget my classes with him! He was thoroughly sound at all times. I remember hearing him say "Young ladies of today think they are being modern by painting themselves but this is a most ancient practice especially among the females of the species."

The republication of his work seems a must to me and the failure to do so, a tragedy.

Chest Agencies

The recently organized United Community Services of Washington, which seems to be a combination of the old Council of Social Agencies and the Community Chest, is still governed, as far as I can ascertain, by the same people who have annually led the organized charity drive to successive failures. Washington newspapers could help this situation by printing the facts and stopping whitewashing the blunders and mistakes of this same group which has ruled Washington philanthropy.

Already, there have been raised again the same objections to including in the fund certain controversial member agencies, the mention of whose names seems to stiffen donor resistance. All too little is said for the inclusion in the fund of enough direct relief organizations to insure the needy the necessities of life.

I do not know of one member agency of Washington that dispenses direct emergency relief. The favorite game of the social workers seems to be referring the needy from one organization to another until finally in disgust they give up in despair and then apply to non-Chest agencies.

What the charity-inclined public is vitally concerned with at fund raising time is whether fuel, food, shelter and raiment are guaranteed to the poor. When ample provision for these have been assured, then all other agencies could be added.

Winston Recital

I should like to register my most emphatic dissent with respect to the unfavorable comment made by your music critic, Mr. Hume, in his October 12 review of Shirley Winston's recital. To me her voice seemed excellent and the arias beautifully sung. As your critic points out, Miss Winston's voice has a splendid quality in the lower reaches, but that does not detract from the equally fine rendition in the upper notes.

It was my observation that the audience at the recital greatly enjoyed Miss Winston's performance, just as I did. It seems unfortunate that your critic saw fit to indulge in such unduly disparaging comments, and it is to be hoped that Miss Winston's voice by its own intrinsic excellence will overcome the effect of what might to a less gifted artist be prejudicial to her career.

Churchill's Warning

Your October 11 editorial, 'Mr. Churchill's Warning," is a polite slap on a master's hoary and bare wrist grown callous with a thousand years of successful British diplomacy. He will either fail to notice the touch altogether, or else brush it off like an annoying gnat.

Every good American can now only hold his breath and pray that when the day of reckoning comes to our young Republic for some of the arrogance and stupidity of our State Department, God may have mercy on us and consider we were brought to our plight by the machinations of a nefarious old hand in world diplomacy which always schemes for its own good.

Not content with living on our dole, of having brought dissension among ourselves with his Fulton, Mo., speech, Churchill like Samson is now trying to pull down the pillars of the temple of civilization, hoping that after the crash England, fairly secure on her island, will emerge victorious, as she has many times during the past thousand years.

What do the English diplomats think we Americans are? I. T.

Vaccination Danger

I noticed in your issue of September 27 an account of the death of a little girl from Suitland, Md., from polio. She had received a recent smallpox vaccination and "booster" diphtheria "shots."

Drs. Turnbull and McIntosh of the British Medical Association not long ago made an investigation of the possible connection between post-vaccinal cincephalitis and smallpox vaccination. As there were many cases in Holland they made part of their investigation there. The result was that the government of Holland prohibited compulsory vaccination.

England, just recently, has repealed the compulsory vaccination laws. It is just about time! Six of our States prohibit compulsory vaccination, and in 10 it is not required for school children.

The fourteenth edition of Encyclopedia Britannica has this to say upon this subject: "Eczema and impetigo have been attributed to vaccination, but no direct connection has been proved to exist between the operation and the occurrence of these disorders. Of a different order is the post-vaccinal cincephalitis by Turnbull and McIntosh of the British Medical Association. The condition has been noticed in some hundreds of cases and manifests itself on the average 10-14 days after vaccination as headache, delirum, paresis, and ultimately coma and death in fatal cases."

With few exceptions, everybody I know who has had smallpox had been vaccinated from 4 to 13 times before he got it.

Rounded Airpower

During the past few weeks, several letters have appeared concerning the use of heavy bombers and naval planes in air warfare. In all of the letters, we readers have been presented with the inflexible choice of putting our airpower trust in either heavy bombers or carrier planes. It would be plain stupidity to restrict ourselves to the senseless measure of rejecting either heavy land-based bombers or sea-based carrier planes.

Did doctors reject the very useful sulfa drugs when penicillin was discovered? Of course not. They realized that different diseases call for varied treatments. There is no such thing as a universal panacea in medicine. In military thinking we also find that no one weapon is the miraculous cure-all.

The responsible top-level military leaders of all three services have long recognized this truth. Repeatedly they have expressed the conviction that future wars would call for the combined efforts of all arms. After the Newport conference in August, General Vandenberg, chief of staff of the Air Force, said "I believe that this imposes on the Air Force the requirement not only to consider possible contributions of other services to Air Force functions but also to seek out aggressively such contributions when they will add to the effectiveness of the job that we are doing. I propose to be guided by this understanding." Admiral Denfeld and General Bradley voiced similar views. Certainly modern warfare is complex enough without penalizing ourselves by illogical artificial restrictions.

In regard to the atom bomb, no one can deny that it required a special dropping technique from high altitudes in the Hiroshima and Nagasaki attacks. But the mere fact that the heavy bomber was the delivery agent in World War II does not give the bomber sole right to carry the bomb in the future.

In any discussion of atomic explosives, we should also take notice of two important points:

(1) The atom bomb is not necessarily restricted to employment only in high altitude air attacks on urban targets.

(2) The heavy bomber is not committed to the sole use of atomic bombs.

Certainly the atom bomb is ideally suited for the mass destruction of cities. Hiroshima and Nagasaki proved that. But it is also easily conceivable that the atomic weapons could be profitably employed tactically or strategically against troop concentrations, shipping assembly points, isolated industrial plants and mines, air or submarine bases, etc.

On the other hand, we should not foolishly handicap ourselves by depending on atom bombs alone in our strategic air offensive. In some cases use of the atom bomb would be as wasteful as killing a fly with a 16-inch gun. For example, would we use an atom bomb capable of wiping out a city for the relatively minor task of destroying an isolated but important railroad bridge in the middle of a mountain wilderness?

Wars are won by a combination of military, economic, intellectual, moral and psychological forces. Military power is a combination of land, sea and air elements, no one of which is self-sufficient to the extent of being capable of winning a war single-handed. Our national airpower consists of more than the heavy bomber or the carrier plane. Air defense interceptors, tactical aircraft to support land and amphibious assaults, carrier aircraft, troop carrier planes, heavy bombers, anti-submarine patrol planes, and air transport are all vital to well-rounded airpower.

Eminence Grise

ROOSEVELT AND HOPKINS: AN INTIMATE HISTORY, by Robert E. Sherwood. (Harper, $6.)

It will be many a day, no doubt, before a judicious and impartial examination can be made of the historical role of the late Harry Hopkins, for ours is one of those unhappy and revolutionary ages when the judgment of even such matters as poetry or games or styles in dress is likely to be distorted by political passions. It must be said for Mr. Sherwood, who has rivaled the labors of Hercules by reading through the contents of Hopkins' forty file-cabinets, and the exploit of the Persian wise men by reducing them somehow to slightly less than a thousand closely printed pages that he is at no pains to disguise his prejudice. He was not only Hopkins' friend; he was also a member of the White House clique and after 1940 one of the principal presidential phrasemakers. Thus he had himself no inconsiderable hand in some of the events with which he deals; and now he looks back upon the Roosevelt epoch and its buoyant enthusiams as to a kind of heroic age.

The view of Hopkins, so often taken by his enemies inside and outside the Administration, as President Roosevelt's evil genius is hardly sustained here, for it is Mr. Sherwood's testimony that in all great matters the influence worked the other way. If, as many now assert, Hopkins' adventures in statesmanship are mainly to blame for the present evil disequilibrium of the world, the psychological explanation seems to lie in his inclination to idolatry and in Mr. Roosevelt's disposition to accept it. Hopkins, says Mr. Sherwood, believed with fanatical faith in the President's infallibility, and with the sharp change in policy after the fall of France in spring of 1940, abandoned without qualm, his own predilection toward a pacifist isolationism. Mr. Marquis Childs, it appears, once observed that if the President had suggested to Hopkins that it would be to the national interest for him to jump off the Washington Monument, his decision about whether or not to wear a parachute would be determined by what he believed to be the presidential intention in the matter. Mr. Sherwood devotes a page or two to a curious and rather plausible argument that Hopkins' adulation of his leader was merely an extreme form of a general American devotion to the Fuehrer Prinzip, as exemplified in the implicit obedience of football players to their coach.

Such relationships as Roosevelt's to Hopkins, however shocking to pious republicans of the stamp of Cato and Jefferson, are of course historically not uncommon. I believe it was Mr. Ciechanowski, the former Ambassador of the Polish government, who first suggested the analogy of Richelieu and Father Joseph. Where Richelieu did his best to have his confidant made a Cardinal, Mr. Roosevelt, if we may trust Mr. Sherwood, attempted something much more difficult in seeking to have his own Gray Eminence elected as his successor, and it was by way of preparation, or, as they say, grooming, that Hopkins was made Secretary of Commerce, and having listened to the siren of ambition engaged in many ignoble intrigues to advance it for which his friend and biographer now feels obliged to blush.

Another analogy to the Roosevelt-Hopkins intimacy, more to the relish of their enemies, has been suggested in the case of Louis XI and Olivier le Daim, but I think it scarcely valid. Whatever his sins, Mr. Roosevelt was not a tyrant, and Hopkins apparently neither sought nor got any profit from the relationship, apart from such pleasure as he may have derived from being courted by the great of all the world. The moral seems to be that one of the penalties of great power is a chronic suspicion of motives, leading to a kind of majestic loneliness and a disposition to depend more and more on the counsel of one trusted familiar. When the late Wendell Willkie visited the White House in January, 1941, Mr. Roosevelt said to him: "Some day you may be sitting here where I am now . . . You'll be looking at that door over there, knowing that practically everybody who walks through it wants something out of you . . . You'll discover a need for somebody like Harry Hopkins who asks for nothing except to serve you." Hopkins, however, had more than loyalty to commend him; he appears to have had a genius for getting to the heart of practical problems and for cutting through bureaucratic complexities and obfuscations. A great deal of the outcry raised by rich taxpayers against his administrations of the relief programs appears in the circumstances to have been as stupid as it was self-interested.

The book contains new and illuminating revelations, the summary of which I must leave to reviewers who command more space than I. Some, such as the accounts of Hopkins' war missions and of the conferences at Casablanca, Cairo Tehran and Yalta, should have considerable value to historians; some are merely amusing or fantastic, as for example the account of how the battleship conveying Mr. Roosevelt and his party to Cairo was almost torpedoed by a destroyer of its own convoy, and the story of how the visiting Queen of England occupied herself during the service at St. John's Church by picking up prayer books, handkerchiefs and other articles dropped by the dowager Mrs. Roosevelt. But, alas, these like most memoirs of the period, show many signs of having been thrown together hastily to catch the market. The writing is often slovenly, and the syntax in some of Mr. Sherwood's narrative is even more grotesque than that in the passages he has quoted from Hopkins' letters and reports.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

An Idea For The Democrats

THE CONCRETE issue remaining between Mr. Truman and Mr. Dewey is whether the Democrats or the Republicans are to "organize" the Senate. What is at stake, or at least may be at stake, in all this traveling which is so tiresome to the candidates and in all the speechmaking which is so tiresome to the audience, is not the Presidency, and not the House of Representatives, but the Senate.

LIPPMANN

That is the only substantial reason left why Mr. Truman and Mr. Dewey continue, as the first Marquess of Halifax put it more than two centuries ago, "throwing fireballs to put men into heat."

THE PARTY which has a majority in the Senate organizes it. This means that it is conceded a majority in the committees and its party man, selected because he has been on the committee longer than any of his colleagues, becomes the chairman of the committee. The substantial issue, therefore, is whether Vandenberg or Connally is to be chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Bridges or McKellar of the Appropriations, Gurney or Tydings of the Armed Services, Millikin or George of Finance, and so forth and so on.

NO ONE is quite sure whether the contest for the Senate is in fact as close as it is in theory. But there is undoubtedly a possibility that though Dewey becomes President by a large electoral vote, and though the House has a strong Republican majority, the Senate might have a nominal Democratic majority. This could happen because the Republicans have vulnerable candidates or the Democrats attractive candidates in Iowa, Minnesota, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Tennessee, West Virginia, Wyoming, and Illinois.

As a matter of fact, in most if not all of these uncertain States the Democratic candidates are not only more attractive to independent and progressive voters but are, on the great issues, much closer to Governor Dewey, and more likely to support him. On the bipartisan foreign policy, on an enlightened domestic program, Mr. Dewey would in fact do better, and have less trouble, if Anderson were to defeat Hurley in New Mexico, if Kefauver defeats Reece in Tennessee, if Paul H. Douglas could defeat Brooks in Illinois, if Revercomb of West Virginia and Robertson of Wyoming, and Wilson of Iowa were retired from the Senate.

THE ODD, and disconcerting, fact about the situation is that in order to keep Senator Vandenberg as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, it is necessary for Governor Dewey, and indeed for independent voters, to work for the election of Republican Senators who have always opposed the measures which Senator Vandenberg stands for. Is this not a foolish predicament? That in order to support Senator Vandenberg it appears to be necessary to work for his opponents, and to defeat men who would, in fact, be among his ablest and best supporters?

Is there no way out of it? Must a voter who believes it essential that Vandenberg remain where he is, wish to see Brooks of Illinois, who always votes against Vandenberg, win over Douglas, who could be counted to vote with him?

THERE IS a very easy way out of this predicament. A handful of Democratic Senators, who are not themselves candidates this year, have only to announce that if the Republicans win the Presidency and the House, and if the control of the Senate depends on a few votes, they will abstain from voting and permit the Republicans to organize the Senate.

Such a move would shock the party hacks. But as a matter of fact it would serve the cause of good government and also the interests of the Democratic Party. The Democrats as a party have much to gain by electing able and enlightened men. But they have nothing to gain by taking nominal control of the Senate against a Republican President and a Republican House. They will only provide an alibi for whatever does not go well. They will be taking responsibility though in reality they will have only the power to obstruct. So it would be much better for the Government, and for the Nation, and for the Democratic Party, if the Dewey Administration had full power and full responsibility.

I DO NOT suppose that Senator Barkley can afford to sponsor such a move. But there are more independently placed Democratic Senators who could do it. By doing it they might well help considerably the Democratic candidates in the doubtful States. There may be quite a few voters who would like to see Anderson, Douglas, Gillette, Humphreys in the Senate and yet do not want to have a divided Government, do not want Vandenberg to lose his leadership of the Foreign Relations Committee.

They would be much less inhibited in their support of the progressives against the reactionaries and isolationists if they knew that the Democrats were not going to insist on organizing the Senate.

THOUGH Governor Dewey, like Senator Barkley, could not participate in such a move, he would in fact also be helped by it. He would be under much less pressure to work for the election of Republicans who, when elected, will obstruct and oppose him. He could still go through the necessary motions of party regularity. But he could view with a certain attachment and considerable equanimity the possibility of the defeat of men who, though they are nominally his party colleagues, are actually his formidable opponents in all that he will wish to achieve.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

Young Hummon And Imperial Wizard

ATLANTA.—With fear, or with gleeful anticipation, or with a kind of wary hopefulness, Georgians are waiting to see what a new Talmadge regime will be like. No one really knows what face the next Governor, Herman Talmadge, known as "Young Hummon," will show to the world. If outward appearances count for anything, Young Hummon should provide a sharp contrast to his father, "Ol' Gene" Talmadge. But a good many shrewd observers here who have watched the younger man in action fear that outward appearances count for very little.

Certainly there is a surface contrast. Ol' Gene's loud bellowing, his single red gallus, his thick "wool-hat" diction, have all been discarded. Instead, Young Hummon goes in for neat blue suits, flowered ties, a suave manner, and grammar, even on the hustings.

At one point during the recent campaign, Young Hummon's advisers, worried by the comparative paleness of his platform manner, urged him to stop using grammar and three-syllable words, and to belch forth fire and brimstone, like Ol' Gene. Young Hummon refused, and although he made it clear that one of his first acts as Governor would be to find some way largely to disfranchise the Negroes, he did so without his father's customary rancor.

The results were surprising. Young Hummon not only held the traditionally pro-Talmadge rural counties, but won some of the urban "streetcar" counties as well, which his father had never done. And in the Georgia back country, the verdict was unanimous: "Young Hummon's even smarter than Ol' Gene."

THIS MAY VERY WELL be true. Young Hummon, with his small, shrewd eyes, his jet-black hair, straight as an Indian's, and his softly courteous manner ("Mighty nice of you to stop by, now you be sure to come again") is a man to be reckoned with, according to those who should know. He is a thoroughly intelligent man, tough, determined and ambitious. And there is no doubt that his ambitions extend beyond the confines of the State of Georgia.

His ambitions explain why he has infuriated the Dixiecrat leaders and given Truman a chance in Georgia by failing to embrace the Dixiecrat cause, for he undoubtedly remembers the fate of other Georgia politicians who have bolted the regular Democratic organization. His ambitions also explain the conscious contrast he is making to his father. Unlike Ol' Gene, Young Hummon, nattily dressed and soft-spoken, is storming such citadels of respectability as the civic and business clubs, making earnest, intelligent speeches on good business or education or soil conservation.

His father also entertained wider ambitions, and Herman Talmadge certainly remembers why Ol' Gene never got to the Senate. The powers that be in Georgia decided that Talmadgism was all very well for home consumption but not for export.

Yet astute Georgians are asking themselves just how far this conversion to moderation and respectability will go. One highly significant index will be the future relationship between Young Hummon and one of his most ardent supporters, Doc Green, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan.

IN HIS WAY, of course, the doctor is eminently respectable. His new red brick suburban house has a determined air of respectability. So does his dentist's office, with its aging magazines, its faded copy of Hippocrates Oath, and its vintage red leather dentist's chair. The imperial wizard (he promoted himself from a mere grand dragon) is a dusty, gray, sad-looking, angry small man. Just as Harry Truman looks like that mythical figure "the average man" in person, so Doc Green, with his long, off-center face, his watery eyes and his small, timid mustache, looks like an unfriendly caricature of the average man.

The imperial wizard will never himself be an important political figure. Yet he is an important political symbol. For the moment, although it is growing, his Ku Klux Klan is more silly than anything else, with its mumbo-jumbo and its soiled bedsheets. But it could again become an important political factor in the South, and not only in the South, because it stands for violent measures to prevent social change.

Two recent typical resolutions in Klan Klaverns are evidence enough, if more evidence is needed. One called for a fight to the finish with the "Jew-loving, Catholic-loving, nigger-loving CIO." Another called for the sending of a letter of appreciation to an Atlanta policeman variously known as "Itchy Trigger Finger" and "Slappin' Sue" for having shot a large number of Negroes.

Despite the newly acquired air of sweet reasonableness, Herman Talmadge and those around him are also, of course, bitter enemies of social change. Therefore, the future relationship between the young Governor and the elderly doctor should be a fairly accurate measure of the pressure for social change in the South, and the resistance against it. The betting seems to be that Young Hummon and the imperial wizard will remain on distant but not unfriendly terms.

IT MUST BE SAID for the record that the men of good will here (and there are many) are almost unanimously convinced that change is on the way, but that the proposed attempt to impose change from Washington has played directly into the hands of the imperial wizard and his friends. Whether they are right or wrong, there is a tension in the air here, a smell of violence to come.

Irked Ickes Announces Radio Talk

The following dispatch in mimeographed form was delivered to newspaper and press association offices in Washington over the weekend.

By Harold L. Ickes

Memorandum for the gentlemen of the great American press—and their colleagues, the radio reporters:

Thursday night I made a speech about Thomas Elusive Dewey. I think that it was a good speech. You should have heard it. Among other things it had singing in it, a few remarks about my frustrated attempts to catch the elusive one's eye, a few questions on specific issues which I hoped the candidate in sneakers might get around to answering some time after he got through the cheer-leading "Team" "Team" "Team" duties! It had everything in it but dancing.

Looked in Vain

Friday morning I looked in vain through some of the great American press to find any mention of it. There was hardly any. I was not surprised.

I have reason to believe that there are certain segments of the American people who like to hear what I have to say about this campaign. I come to this conclusion from my mail, telegrams and telephone calls.

The great American press, except in rare instances, failed to mention sufficiently ahead of time that I was speaking on Thursday night. I am sure that there are all sorts of explanations for this.

Expects Little Publicity

The purpose of this memorandum is to inform you that I am speaking in Great Falls, Mont., on Friday evening, October 22, at 10:30 p. m., EST, over more than 400 stations of the Mutual Broadcasting System—again on the subject of Mr. Dewey.

Would you, therefore, be kind enough to convey this news to the radio editors of your newspapers?

Frankly, I do not expect you to cover the speech or to reprint its substance in your columns the following day. Long public experience has convinced me of the mundane judiciousness of the press during election years. Long experience has also convinced me—pleasantly—that these calculations never have the slightest effect on the final results.

I am thanking you in advance for notifying your radio columns. I do not expect anything else. Should I receive anything else, I would be overcome with shock.

County Ceremonies Start 2 Churches

Ground was broken for the new Bethesda Methodist Church, and the cornerstone of the Silver Spring Congregational Christian Church was laid at ceremonies yesterday.

The Bethesda ceremony took place at the site, Huntington pkwy. and Old Georgetown rd. The Rev. Hartwell F. Chandler, pastor, emphasized that the event was not just for his own congregation.

"We are joining together with other churches to bring the Kingdom of God to Bethesda and to the hearts of its people," he said.

At the morning service, Dr. Ralph D. Smith, superintendent of the West Washington Methodist District, said the church is "the prime bulwark against the forces of atheism, evil and secularism."

Programs of church events, a list of the members, and descriptive brochures were among the items which were placed in the cornerstone of the Silver Spring Congregational Christian Church in the program at Colesville rd. and Indian Spring dr.

The Rev. John F. McClelland, pastor since the church was organized in 1944, officiated at the service, and speakers included William Kincaid Newman, secretary of the board of home missions, and John T. Beach of the Middle Atlantic Conference of the Congregational Christian Church.

Dr. Fred Sherman Buschmeyer, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, and newly appointed associate minister of the Congregational Christian Churches, pointed out that the new church literally was founded upon rock, the rock of the Christian idea, and that the members were the living foundation of the church.

Chinese Art Put on Show

An exhibit of works by some 30 of China's finest contemporary painters opened yesterday at the International Student House, 1825 R st. nw., for a five-day show.

It was the third exhibit of water colors by present-day Chinese artists to be launched here within a week. A showing of 30 water colors, several of Washington scenes, runs through November 4 at the United Nations Club, 1701 19th st. nw. A two-day exhibit of water colors on religious subjects —by Luke Ch'en—drew 500 viewers at the institute of Chinese Culture, 2200 R st. nw.

Around 100 opening-day visitors, including Chinese Ambassador. V. K. Wellington Koo, turned out for the International Student House show.

One of the painters, Prof. Wang Yu-chun, who was designated to bring the collection to the United States for a series of exhibits, was there with a palette, brush and assorted pigments. Surrounded by a group of admirers, he produced several delicate water colors in practically no time.

The artists concentrated on mountains and rivers, birds, fish, cornstalks and flowers.

Tales Author To Give Talk At Luncheon

Readers who are enjoying the "Tales of the South Pacific" now running each Sunday in The Washington Post will get a chance to meet the author, James A. Michener, at The Post's Book and Author Luncheon Wednesday.

Michener

Michener, a member of the editorial staff of the Macmillan Co. book publishing house, will be one of a panel of speakers which also includes Frances and Richard Lockridge, authors of the "Mr. and Mrs. North" mysteries; Pat Frank, author of "Mr. Adam" and "An Affair of State," and Mary Laswell, who wrote "Suds in Your Eye" and the recent "Bread for the Living."

Michener wrote the "Tales of the South Pacific" while serving as a naval officer. He spent a good part of the war hopping from one island to another, which was right in the Michener tradition of travel. He hitchhiked across the United States at the age of 14 and by the time he was 20 had visited 45 of the States. After going through college on a scholarship he spent two years at St. Andrews University in Scotland. He also studied in Italy and in Spain.

When the war came he got into naval aviation, was sent to Washington, and finally to Solomon Islands to check on aviation maintenance troubles.

"Tales of the South Pacific" won Michener the Pulitzer Prize this year.

The luncheon at which Michener will speak is sponsored by The Washington Post to stimulate interest in books by helping bring authors and their public together. It will take place Wednesday at 1 p. m. in the Hotel Statler. Tickets at $3 each are available at book stores and in department store book departments.

Golden Rule Extolled by Dr. Baird, Presbyterian Leader, in Sermon Here

The world must have faith, hope and love, or it will destroy itself, the moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the United States said last night.

Speaking at the National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N sts. nw., the Rev. Dr. Jesse H. Baird declared that the power of evangelism alone can turn bad people into good ones.

The golden rule, he asserted, offers the only pattern which will give us a world fit to live in.

Live in Changed World

Dr. Baird pointed out that we live in the same world our fathers did. Three things have changed it, however, he said. These are:

"The scientific revolution, which gives up a potential power for good or evil which we never had before. We must learn to live with this new-found power which 'men's genius and God's gracious power has given us."

2. America is in the lead in the world. The other nations, he said, admire and fear us; they are baffled by us. If there were another war, America would win, Dr. Baird declared, but there would be nothing left of European civilization but a "vast wilderness of anarchy and chaos."

American must measure up to its position of world leadership whether it wants to or not, he said, adding that the essence of leadership today is patience.

Evangelism Needed

3. The only answer to our problems today is a sptritual and moral one, the speaker declared. He said the world needs the Christian philosophy of light, and that evangelism must take to the world the tidings of Christ.

"The most important thing in the world today is that the Christian church of the United States become the glorious church that in the eyes of God she ought to become," he concluded.

Dr. Baird's appearance here was his first in a Nation-wide tour of Presbyterian churches.

The new moderator was introduced by Ruling Elder Wilbur LaRoe, jr., former moderator. Others who participated in the program were the Rev. Dr. J. S. Venable, moderator of the Synod of Baltimore; the Rev. Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, moderator of the Presbytery of Washington City; the Rev. Jacob A. Long, secretary of the Department of City and Industry, Board of National Missions, and the Rev. Dr. Edward L. R. Elson, pastor of National Church.

One on the Aisle—

C. U. Takes Over National's Mantle

By Richard L. Coe

WITH THE PASSING of the National into the world of shadows, Catholic University's speech and drama department assumes, unsought, the role of this Capital's leading playhouse of the living theater.

For its first offering of the new season, the group has chosen to do Shakespeare's "King Lear," which Margaret Webster, one of the foremost practicing Shakespeareans of our day, has called the playwright's "least actable" tragedy.

The group is wearing its buskins with a will under the direction of Basil Langton, who, as one of England's more prominent directors, has had oceans of experiences with the tragedy. It would be a welcome thing to say that all hands have achieved the well-nigh impossible, but once again, as in nine times out of ten in the past, "King Lear" has not come to life on the stage.

This is not, I think, too much the fault of the group's careful production, though some of the claims for it in program notes are highly inflated. "Lear" is simply too remote, too complex to be satisfactory on the stage.

An epic in poetry it most certainly is; thoughts, lines and speeches of prodigious concept pour from the play. But its central figure is not one to stir your sympathy as you see him from the audience. He is a crabbed old man, disowning the one person who clearly loves him. He deserves no good from fate. While one may be interested in the storms that beset him and in his ultimate redemption, we cannot feel for him as we do for the impotent Hamlet, the ambitious Macbeth, the frail Othello.

Highly Taxing Plot

The subplot is fantastically complex, simple enough to follow in a scholar's reading perhaps, but hopelessly involved as theater material. The schemings of Edmund, the counterpoint of Gloucester, the disguises of Edgar, the entrances and exits of Kent, the poetic fancies in the Fool, all these characters and their actions make demands on an audience that are hopelessly taxing.

A program note states: "The approach to this production has been in the nature of a first study—the text has been treated as though it were a theatrical piece which had come directly from the playwright's hand and had not been sifted through three and a half centuries of commentary and speculation."

There is, alas, more fancy than matter in this laudable aim. Surely if this were a modern scrip without the endless commentary of the scholars, it would have received some of the editing Olivier has been forced to adopt to fit "Hamlet" into presentable film form. How much could have been cut and where, I do not presume to say. But without editing and, indeed, ruthless cutting, such a program note is meaningless.

Implications Denied

The program goes on to say: "In accordance with this view the staging abandons the modern convention of the picture-frame stage and avoids the use of scenery to indicate locale. The purpose of this is to give freedom to the play, the stage, the actors and your imagination. It was under similar conditions that Lear was first performed by Shakespeare's actors in 1606."

Again this implies more than the facts: Gordon Craig designed similar platforms and stages 30 years ago and Orson Welles' stark staging of "Julius Caesar" 10 years ago avoided localized scenery, as have many present-day productions. It moves the play along with a speed otherwise impossible, but the device is by no means an abandonment of modern convention. It is modern convention. And the sounds of thunder during Lear's "Blow winds and crack your cheeks!" are the same sounds of shattering metal that accompanied Robert Mantell and Fritz Lieber.

I point out these facts not in an unkindly spirit, but in an effort to show that however you slice it, the play is still incapable of effective staging, no matter what you may say or think you are doing differently. To this Professor Tupper would answer "Don't be too fastidious. You're not supposed to be a twentieth century realist. Accept the truth of feelings not fact." The fact remains, Lear is here presented as an acted play and as such it doesn't strike fire.

Splendidly Lighted

The most compelling feature of this performance is the skilled use of lighting. The stage is never uncomfortably steeped in gloom; rather the lighting flows along with the story, bridging episodes with skilled effect.

The man responsible for the lighting also is playing Lear, James D. Waring, but in that exhausting role he is less successful. He has a big voice, but it is not the voice of the old man. His ragings at court and his raillery of the storm are of a piece; there is no shading in this Lear. It is forcefully read, no more.

Edgar's implausable actions (why does he keep his identity from his father when it is no longer necessary?) are in surprisingly good hands. John Walsh does the role well, particularly in the frenzies of poor Tom. This boy is a fine Edgar. Joseph K. Emmet, too, is admirable as the interesting Albany, a man it seems to me far more plausable and absorbing than Lear. Dick Sykes is the soliloquizing Edmund, acting with fire but still with the identical mannerisms Sykes has given to every role in his long career on Washington stages.

Of the three women Teddy Kinsey's Cordelia has dignity and warmth, but Marilyn Hurley's Regan is a disappointment in monotony, almost a figure from Charles Adams. Naomi Vincent's Goneril is better, but she, too, is too studied to bring the more interesting of the two evil sisters to life.

Director Langton stresses the barbaric—or, as Granville Barker calls it "megalithic grandeur"—of the play, which is wise indeed, though the effect is to accent the remoteness of the play. Which is, unfortunately, both the heart and the trap of the Bard's most unstageworthy craft.

If I seem to have waded heavily into these classic waters, lay it to the fact that this group is now a world capital's closest approach to professional theater. As such, the group deserves the considerations of its position.

Redskins Take 45-0 Walloping From Eagles

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

GRIFFITH STADIUM, OCT. 17.—The Redskins kick off to the Eagles and thus make their first mistake. The Eagles don't give the ball up until 80 yards later when Pete Pihos politely hands it to the referee after taking a 19-yard touchdown pass from Tommy Thompson.

POVICH

The high-salaried Steve Van Buren ripped off a 9-yard gain inside the Redskins' 20 as his contribution to the Eagles' 7-0 lead. It was a quick-opening, smash into the Redskins' line by Van Buren who always has been a fast guy wtih a buck.

The Eagles have the ball again and Thompson is throwing some more passes, mainly to Pritchard. At this point, Thompson has completed five of his six passes and a dour Redskin rooter in the press box grudgingly concedes "that average will keep him in the league."

14-0, Eagles. Thompson, getting positively flip with the Redskins, flips out to Van Buren at left end for the last 3 yards and it's a triumph for the Eagles' ground-floor coaching over the Redskins' high command.

SAMMY BAUGH COMPLETES a pass to Jack Myers, but unfortunately that young man is in the hire of Lex Thompson's Eagles. Myers races to the Washington 41, and the Redskins ask for another 2-minute truce to ponder their futility. At this point they're leading the Eagles by a wide margin in time-outs.

The Eagles are going soft. On fourth down, with only 16 yards to go for a touchdown, they choke up and order a field goal by Cliff Patton for a lousy three points. 17-0, Eagles, in the second quarter.

The Redskins make their biggest gain of the day, stepped off at a brisk trot by Referee Downs who is penalizing the Eagles for roughing the kicker, Dick Poillon. On the next play, though, Baugh is smeared for an 11-yard loss. The Redskins were offside but the Eagles, after a bit of quick arithmetic, decline the penalty.

Thompson is back in action with the Eagles and he fakes to everybody in their backfield including himself, before handing the ball off to Noble Doss for a 16-yard journey around the Redskins' well-turned right end.

The Redskins haven't been out of their own territory all during the half and during the intermission they'll doubtless be told to seek new fields inasmuch as their own territory is conducive only to Eagle touchdowns.

Rookie Quarterback Bill Mackrides of Nevada takes over for the Eagles at the start of the second half. The Redskins laid Thompson low with a shoulder separation and divoreed him from the game for the day. Anyway, the Eagles are resting him for next week's affair with the Bears.

31-0, Eagles. Prichard just made indecent exposure of the weakness in the Redskins' line with a naked reverse that carried him 32 yards through left tackle for a touchdown. Sandifier made a grab for him in the secondary but got only a wispy handful of jersey of the hot-footing Prichard.

SAMMY BAUGH just completed his longest pass of the game, a 34-yarder to Ernie Steele, and the Redskins don't have the ball any more. A bit later the Redskins gain some kind of a moral victory when they force the Eagles to punt for the first time during the afternoon.

Kilroy was there, and so was Alex Wojciehowicz when Bob Nussbaumer banged 2 yards through the Eagles' left side. Frank Kilroy made the tackle and Wojie picked Nussbaumer's fumble out of mid-air for the Eagles.

38-0, Eagles. Van Buren, the faker, faked Defensive Halfback Tommy Mont neatly out of his path and was free as the ozone in the end zone after a 7-yard sprint.

45-0, Eagles. After the Eagles get nothing on Mackrides' quarterback sneak from the 4-yard line, they turn honest and send Ernie Steele out into the open at right end for a touchdown. The guy who is kicking all these extra points is Cliff Patton, three years out of Texas Christian.

The crowd is officially announced as 35,584 spectators. Including the Redskins?

Yankees Surprise Steelers By 13 to 7

Boston, Oct. 17 (AP).—Boston's underdog Yanks handled the Pittsburgh Steelers with the greatest of ease while winning their first National Football League home game, 13-7, today before a slim 7208 crowd at Fenway Park.

The Steelers, who drubbed the Yanks, 28-14, two weeks ago and beat the Washington Redskins, 10-7, last week, were helpless until the last minute of play when a pass interference ruling set up their touchdown chance.

Ralph Heywood and LeRoy Zimmerman, a pair of recent acquisitions from the Detroit Lions, provided the punch for the Yanks.

Heywood, a tall and sturdy defensive end, picked up a Pittsburgh fumble in the first period and bashed his way 18 yards to score.

Zimmerman Passing Star

Zimmerman, nine years a professional, but playing his first season for the Yanks, hurled three passes that sparked a 62-yard Boston touchdown drive in the final period. The score provided the Yanks' margin of victory.

The triumph, the first for Boston over Pittsburgh in three years, was more emphatic than the score or statistics indicated.

The Steelers were bottled up in their own territory most of the game as six pass interceptions ruined their aerial attack. They were unable to move the ball more than 12 yards beyond midfield except by punting until the final period.

Steelers Score

Then, facing a shutout with but 30 seconds left to play, the Steelers got to the Boston 2-yard line when a 37-yard pass from high-priced Rookie Ray Evans was ruled complete as a result of interference. Jerry Shipkey bucked over for the score.

The Yanks, seeking to prove their 17-14 win over Detroit last week was no fluke, produced a vicious braid of line play that was responsible for the Pittsburgh fumble which set up the first score.

They found their offensive punch in Zimmerman, who hurled passes of 29, 6 and 22 yards as the Yanks drove to their second touchdown in seven plays. Halfback Frank Seno plucked the payoff pass from the hands of defender Bryant Meeks in the end zone.

Here's One Team Still Unbeaten, Unscored On

Although Duke rubbed out Maryland from the list of the unbeaten, untied teams, there's still one area football team with a perfect mark.

It's the Langdon Lions, a 140-pound outfit, which yesterday swamped Brookland A. C., 39-0, for its fifth straight victory. The Lions haven't been scored on this year.

GANGWAY FOR STEVE—With Neil Armstrong (80) applying a block on Redskin Howie Livingston (24), the Eagles' Steve Van Buren begins a 9-yard run in the first period against the Redskins yesterday. Van Buren was one of many Eagles in motion as the Philadelphians raced to a 45-0 victory. Van Buren contributed three of the six touchdowns

Van Buren Paces Rout With Three Touchdowns

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The Philadelphia Eagles wound up a very pleasant weekend in Washington yesterday at Griffith Stadium.

Before the largest crowd to witness a professional game here this season, 35,584 paying customers, the Eagles clawed their way to a resounding 45-0 victory and jumped into leadership of the Eastern Division, National Football League.

Also present, while the Philadelphians made their '48 record two victories, one loss and a tie, were the Washington Redskins. They were the hosts and their hospitality was little short of amazing.

To make the Eagles' visit as enjoyable as possible, the Redskins accepted a runnerup tie with the Pittsburgh Steelers and in so doing served up six luscious touchdowns, as many extra points and a second-quarter field goal to their guests.

Several Injuries Result

Of course the Eagles had something to do with it. They tied the NFL team record for first downs in one game—28—started off with a pair of touchdowns in the first period, added 10, 14 and 7 points in the following frames. When it was over the Eagles had the same total they enjoyed in the teams' first meeting last year, but there was a 42-point difference in the Skins' total.

The rough battle resulted in several injuries, chief of which was the shoulder separation suffered by Quarterback Tommy Thompson, who passed to the Eagles' first touchdown. The Redskins' reserve center, Don Corbitt, came up with a broken left arm and the extent of damages to Philadelphia's Tackle George Savitsky, carried from the field in the third period, was undetermined.

If there was an individual star for the Eagles it had to be big Steve Van Buren, who accounted for three of the winners' touchdowns. He got them all on 13 of the 91 yards he covered during the afternoon.

Before he was rather thoroughly mauled by Tackle John Adams on the last play of the second stanza, Thompson completed 12 out of 17 passing attempts, picking up 170 yards.

The Redskins' chief boasting points were that they kept Philadelphia from breaking the first down record, and they once reached the Eagle 13-yard line. The fact that both feats were accomplished against Eagle reserves perhaps shouldn't be mentioned.

Pihos Scores on Pass

Except for that one last-period excursion to the enemy's 13, Washington's bright but easily moved young men stayed put behind the Eagle 47. Even the march to the thirteen was tainted, coming as it did on fourth down and leaving the hosts 3 yards short of a first.

The Quaker City outfit was supposed to be a mere 10½-point favorite, but by half time it was safetly past that margin and winging with a 14-0 lead. The Eagles picked up points the first four times they had possession, the only reason they missed on the fifth being a shortage of time at intermission.

Cards Batter Giants, 63-35

Mallouf Hurls Four Touchdowns

By Austin Bealmear

New York, Oct. 17 (AP).—With Ray Mallouf pitching four touchdown passes, the Chicago Cardinals flattened the New York Giants, 63-35, before 35,342 fans at the Polo Grounds today in the highest scoring game ever played in the National Football League.

Rookie Charley Conerly, attempting to keep the defensively weak Giants in the wild contest, matched Mallouf's feat of tossing four touchdown passes and tallied the fifth New York marker himself.

The teams went to rest at half-time with the Giants trailing, 14-42.

The total of 98 points wiped out the league record of 87 in a single game, set when Philadelphia nosed out Washington, 45-42, on September 28, 1947.

Pat Harder, who kicked all nine extra points for the Cards, also set a new league mark. The previous high was eight conversions by Bob Snyder of the Chicago Bears, also against the Giants, in 1943.

As the score would indicate, the Cardinals did not miss their injured first string quarterback, Paul Christman. With Mallouf running the team perfectly, the Cards set the stage for the rout in the opening minute when Harder broke through and rambled 71 yards to a touchdown on the third play after the opening kickoff.

Minutes later, Mallouf tossed a 26-yard touchdown pass to Bill Dewell. In the second period, the Cards scored four times.

Mallouf passed to Mal Kutner for two touchdowns in that quarter, one on a 45-yard play and the other from 6 yards out. Boris Dimancheff tallied on a 26-yard run and Jerome Davis returned a punt 70 yards to score with 20 seconds of the half remaining.

Chicago scored only once in the third period, on a 7-yard pass from Mallouf to Charley Trippi. In the final quarter, Angsman scampered 13 yards to score at the end of an 82-yard drive and Charley Eichenberg, taking over from Mallouf, passed 24 yards to Kutner.

Conerly passed 26 yards to Ray Poole for New York's first marker and six to Joe Johnson for the second. The next two came on passes to Bill Swiacki, one for three and the other for 20. When the Giants marched 52 yards in the closing moments, Conerly carried the ball over from 3 yards out.

Highest Scoring Game in NFL History

Bears Whip Lions, 28-0

By Jerry Liska

Chicago, Oct. 17 (AP).—The undefeated Chicago Bears fell below their 38-point average but still powered a 28-0 triumph over the winless Detroit Lions for their fourth straight National Football League victory today.

A weather-chilled throng of 39,617 watched the National loop's only unbeaten club punch across a touchdown in each of the first two quarters and thehn bang across two more in the final period.

The hapless Lions suffered their fourth straight league loss.

Sid Luckman, who pitched only six passes and completed four, really settled the issue in the first period when he fired a six-yard payoff shot to End Ken Kavanaugh. That touchdown capped an 88-yard Bear march which got most of its steam from a 49-yard pass from Luckman to Don Kindt.

Kindt scampered 66 yards on a brilliant touchdown run for the Bears' second touchdown in the second period.

The Bears chalked up touchdown No. 3 at the outset of the fourth quarter on a 2-yard plunge by George Gulyanics after a 37-yard drive.

The final score came with eight seconds left on a 1-yard smash by Joe Osmanski. Johnny Lujack converted after all four Bear touchdowns.

Lions Beaten At Providence

Providence, R. I., Oct. 17.—The Rhode Island Reds scored their fourth victory in four American Hockey League starts this season when they defeated the Washington Lions, 4-2, before 6151 fans here tonight.

It was the third defeat in three starts for the Lions.

Two quick goals early in the second period after the Lions had tied up the count at 1-1 gave the Reds a lead which the Washington team was never able to overcome. The score was still 3-1 at the end of the second period and each team scored a goal in the last.

The Lions mustered only 15 men in uniform tonight due to injuries. The Reds lost Center Ray LaPlante midway through the game when he was struck in the eye by a puck fired by his teammate, Roger Bedard. LaPlante was sent to the hospital for examination and treatment of what was feared to be a ruptured pupil in his right eye.

Jack Stoddard put the Reds in the lead late in the first period and Harry Dick tied it up early in the second. Danny Summers scored for the Reds soon after Dick's tally but when the Washington defenseman was penalized shortly thereafter, Stoddard scored another Providence goal.

Terps Try to Forget Duke And Folger to Prep for GW

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

If you've ever held a pat hand in a poker game only to lose the pot when someone drew to a two-card flush and made it, then you know how Coach Jim Tatum of Maryland felt last night.

"They came up with the case ace in Billy Cox's 82-yard touchdown run," said the man who played the hand for the Terps in Maryland's 13-12 loss to Duke Saturday.

"We had 'em on the ropes . . . Losing to Duke was the biggest disappointment of my coaching career . . . We did everything better than they did . . . The boys are absolutely broken-hearted."

The Duke game will be forgotten today when the Old Liners start preparations for Saturday's Griffith Stadium scuffle with George Washington.

"And I think George Washington's first team is as good as Duke's," Tatum added.

To which GW Coach Bo Rowland, whose Colonials lost, 12-0, to Kansas Friday said:

"Nuts. I wish Tatum was right. If he were, we'd give him a whang of a scrap . . . I saw the Duke-Maryland game and it delighted me no end, but when I suddenly remembered we had to play 'em both, gosh, I started shuddering. Man, those were two good football teams out there Saturday.

"Our boys weren't too alert against Kansas, a team which didn't impress me half as much as either Maryland or Duke . . . We're not even thinking about Maryland . . . We're pointing to The Citadel game November 6 . . . We've got a chance to win that one."

And out at the Jack Hagerty home last night, the Georgetown coach was smiling. And he had a perfect right to be, because his Hoyas had conked a favored Tulsa team, 13-7.

"That was a good win for us," Hagerty smiled. "We thought we were sure losers there . . . We lost Baranowski on Monday and just before we left Vic Banonis was confined to the campus for disciplinary reasons. . . .

"But we put the double-cross on Tulsa. We had them scouted as a passing team, but they crossed us on and ran . . . Then we crossed them up and let Billy Conn, whom they had scouted as a runner, pass."

Hagerty and his once-victorious, twice-conquered Hilltoppers will be favored to even their season's record Friday when they clash with Fordham at Griffith Stadium. Center and Captain Banonis will probably rejoin the tea mthis week.

Pick-the-Winner Lineup Will Appear In Tuesday's Post

The list of games for the third big week of The Washington Post's Pick-the-Winner Football Contest will be published in Tuesday morning's paper.

If you haven't already entered the big contest make it a "must" for this week. Each weekly winner receives two (2) tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 27, with all expenses paid for the trip to the big game for two persons. The winner also receives four (4) tickets to a major college or professional game in this area to be selected by The Washington Post.

The winner of last week's contest probably will be announced on Thursday morning.

Packers Whip Rams, 16 to 0; Lambeau Mum on Fine Refund

By Chris Edmonds

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 17 (AP).—The Green Bay Packers smarted just enough from wallet wounds today to defeat the Los Angeles Rams, 16-0, in the season's final National Football League game at City Stadium. A crowd of 25,119 was on hand.

The victory, third for the Packers in five league games, kept them on the fringe of the western division title chase. The Rams now have two defeats against one victory and a tie.

The Packers, chastened by the half-game fine slapped on the whole squad by Coach E. L. (Curly) Lambeau following their miserable showing a week ago, had just enough spark to win—but that was all.

Earhart Scores

If they were brilliant it was largely in pass defense, as they intercepted seven of Bob Waterfield's tosses, several of them to halt incipient scoring threats.

Lambeau refused to comment tonight on whether last week's fines might be refunded to the players. In fact, his only comment was "we beat a good team."

The Packers struck twice in three minutes, at the end of the first and start of the second quarters. Ralph Earhart, speedy rookie halfback, got behind Gerry Cowhig with one minute to go in the opener and grabbed 44-yard pass from Jack Jacobs. He went 20 more yards to score.

A Waterfield interception set up the other touchdown. Ted Cook latched onto the ball on the Ram 45 and returned to the 26. It took five plays to move to the 2, with Walt Schlinkman crashing over. Ted Fritsch, whose try after the first score was wide, hit on this one.

Fritsch got the rest of the points with a prodigious field goal near the end of the third quarter. He booted 43 yards into a strong west wind, the ball clearing the bay by a big margin.

Neither team showed anything resembling a sustained attack. The Rams through Waterfield's efforts and despite the Packer defense, netted 335 yards, all but 84 overhead.

Wofford Has Unbeaten Record But Still Hasn't Won a Game

Spartanburg, S. C., Oct. 17. (AP).—Wofford College has the best drawing football team in the country.

The reference is not to the team's success in luring cash customers to its contests, but to its record of four straight tie games in as many starts this year.

The Terriers opened with a 6-6 tie against Hampden-Sydney; played a scoreless game with Northwestern State of Louisiana; followed with a 7-7 deadlock against Catawba and yesterday went 7-7 with Furman.

Two of those stalemates were achieved in the last minute of play on short passes thrown by Freshman Tailback Bob Starnes of Chester, S. C.

Phil Dickens, in his second year as head coach following stretches as backfield mentor at North Carolina State and Mississippi State, tries to use the two-team system as much as circumstances allow.

"We have only two seniors on our first two squads, most of the boys are sophomores," he said. "By using the two-team system nobody has to go all out for 50 or 60 minutes and we believe we get the most out of our modest material," he added.

Dickens figures that only against Hampden-Sydney was his team even a 50-50 shot. It was the underdog in the others.

Graham Hurls Two Touchdowns

By Larry Smith

Cleveland, Oct. 17 (AP).—"Automatic" Otto Graham pitched two touchdown passes and figured in another scoring drive as the Champion Cleveland Browns notched their seventh straight All-America Conference triumph today in the mud, with a 31 to 14 victory over the Buffalo Bills.

The weather held the crowd down to 28,054, smallest home attendance in the Browns' history.

Graham wasn't his usual sharp self on a dull, rainy afternoon, but nevertheless his throwing arm made the difference as the Browns went through their fifteenth straight conference game without a defeat.

The game was only three minutes old when Graham lofted one to Edgar (Special Delivery) Jones. Jones gathered the ball in over his shoulder while on the dead run to complete a 44-yard scoring play.

The Bills bounced back to knot the count seven minutes later with Jim Still hurling a 22-yarder to Alton Baldwin in the end zone. But that was the closest Buffalo came to fashioning a lead.

Lou Groza then booted a 45-yard field goal after Graham failed on three straight pasing attempts. The Browns climaxed the scoring-packed first quarter by moving 43 years for their secon dtouchdown. Passes from Mac Speedie moved Cleveland within scoring range and Marion Motley bulled over from the 3.

Cleveland then widened the gap in the third quarter with another touchdown, Graham flipping 15 yards to Speedie.

The Bulls kept plugging away, however, and a 44-yard pass play from George Ratterman to Chet Mutryn put them on the Cleveland 16 in the fourth period. Ratterman then hit Lou Tomasetti on a 9-yard heave for a touchdown with two and a half minutes to go.

But the Browns still had another touchdown in their system and pushed to pay dirt with less than a minute to go. The drive covered 70 yards and wound up with a 30-yard toss from Lewis to Speedie.

Peggy Skipper's Arbitrator Wins Hunter Championship

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Upper Marlboro, Md., October 17.—Peggy Skipper's Arbitrator annexed the hunter championship with 13 points at the Marlboro Fair horse show held here as a forerunner of the Marlboro Fair.

A. N. Smith's Flying Heels finished in the reserve hunter spot with a score of 6 points. In the jumper runer-up position, a three-way tie resulted, due to lack of competent understanding of the Maryland Horse Show's Associations rules, between Robert C. Lee's Bonne Fille, Skippy Diehlman's Steel Rock, and Sergt. Joe Owen's Black Jack, the reserve ribbon still not having been awarded to either as darkness engulfed the infield of the Marlboro race track.

Baltimore Jockey Dies Of Bullet Wound in Head

Edward Russell Hopkins, 20-year-old jockey, died of a gunshot wound yesterday en route to St. Agnes Hospital in Baltimore from Laurel, Md. He was found in a wooded area near Laurel race track.

Maryland State police at Waterloo said that a companion, Wiley Albritton, of Hialeah Fla., a groom at the track, told them that Hopkins shot himself with a .22 rifle after threatening suicide.

Albritton told the State police he and Hopkins had been together three days and that Hopkins several times had said laughingly that he intended killing himself.

They borrowed a rifle from a friend and yesterday went to a wooded area about 500 yards west of the race track for target practice. Finding they had no ammunition, Hopkins went back to Laurel and obtained some. He returned and fired several shots and then knelt down and said he was going to kill himself.

Albritton, who was about 25 yards away, he told police, turned in time to see Hopkins place the gun to his head, laughing all the while and then pull the trigger. Albritton then ran for help. Hopkins was taken to St. Agnes in a Walters funeral home ambulance but died before reaching the ambulance.

Maryland State police found two notes in his pocket. One was addressed to his mother, Mrs. Charles C. Alvater, and his wife, both of Baltimore. Contents of the notes was not divulged.

Hopkins married Mrs. Lelita Leggett October 6 at Ellicott City, Md. She was the widow of Jockey Benny Leggett, killed July 28 when thrown by Alpine Boy July 25 at Charles Town, W. Va.

Hopkins was licensed to ride at Laurel, but had not ridden so far in the current meet. He rode at Charles Town and at other Maryland half-mile tracks this spring.

The body was removed to the Baltimore morgue to await action of the Baltimore medical examiner.

Albert Leads 49ers Over Yankees, 21-7

By Harold Claassen

New York, Oct. 17 (AP).—A left-handed magician, named Frankie Albert, disguised himself in a San Francisco uniform today and completely bewildered the New York Yankees and 29,743 paying customers, 21 to 7, in an All-America Conference football game.

It was the eighth straight league triumph for the Californians, who share the top in the Western half of the loop with Cleveland, also unbeaten.

Albert wasn't the entire show as the two teams battled on virtually even terms but it was his heady play that held the 49ers together despite a vicious New York line that threw San Francisco backs for loss after loss.

The first period was scoreless but on the second play of the second the ever present Albert flung a 21-yard toss to John Strazykalski on the goal line. The later scored on one step. In the same period the same Albert sneaked one yard for a marker while the entire New York outfit expected Norm Standlee to blast the distance.

The scoring pass to Stryzkalski was the fourteenth game in which Albert had turned the trick, establishing a conference record. The final San Francisco marker, later in the fourth session, also had the Albert imprint.

He spun 21 yards to take the ball deep into Yankee territory and then sent Speedy Jim Cason 28 more yards around left end. Joep Perry finally carried it over.

Spec Sanders was the big wheel in the New Yorker touchdown which also came in the fourth. He passed to Bruce Alford for 29 yards that took the ball to the 13. On the fourth smack the Texan went over.

Miller Beats Bogley, 4-3

Dad Gets a Tourney Together And Son Bob Captures Title

By Sy Fishbein
Post Reporter

Some time ago Tom Miller decided there ought to be a junior club championship this year at Prince Georges Country Club.

So he coaxed and telephoned and finally scared up a juniors' tournament.

Yesterday, Miller had the double satisfaction of seeing the tournament come to a successful conclusion and of seeing his 17-year-old son, Robert, crowned as junior club champion of Prince Georges. Robert defeated Jimmy Bogley, the son of Walter Bogley, 4 and 3.

The Prince Georges Bank Trophy was won by Robert Bowie yesterday. His winning score was 76—6—70. C. E. Purday finished second, shooting 85—14—71.

ARMY-NAVY—Col. R. J. Browne won the club championship, defeating Col. Paul Clifford, 2 and 1, in the finals yesterday. The loser was 2-up at the twenty-eighth but Colonel Browne pulled up even at the thirty-second and went on to win.

BELLE HAVEN—Frank Wooley, a first-year member, defeated Lieut. Howard M. Sias, 2 and 1, yesterday in the 36-hole final for the club championship. It was the second straight year that Sias finished second, having been beaten in last year's final by Col. Ben Schriever. . . . It was a close match yesterday until the last nine started. Wooley hit a hot streak at that point, winning the twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth and thirtieth to build up a four-hole lead. Sias pared it down to two holes on the thirty-first and thirty-second and they halved the next three holes to close it out. Their medal scores: Wooley, 76—75—151; Sias, 77—76—153.

C. C. of Maryland Wins State Title

Baltimore, Oct. 17 (AP).—The Country Club of Maryland won its third straight Maryland State Golf Association team championship today by defeating the Rolling Road Club, 13-5.

The closest contest of the day saw Andy Gibson and Ken Scales of the winning club edge out Charlie Bassler and Spencer Overton, 2½ to ½. Scales' birdie on the twelfth provided the margin of victory in a match in which 17 of the 18 holes were halved.

game, from 19½ yards out, accounted for the initial touchdown. Pete Pihos caught it on the goal line, with Defense Man Dan Sandifer flat-footed, and stepped into the end zone on the end of an 80-yard march with the opening kickoff.

Cliff Patton kicked the first of six extra points, bringing his record to 18, without a miss.

The Redskins put on a terrific drive in retaliation and got all the way to a yard across midfield, but there a kick was necessary when Jim Castiglia's try for two yards on third down was stopped cold.

The Eagles came on again. This time they went 78 yards and on the end was Van Buren hitting the center from 2 yards out.

Sammy Baugh's second pass of the game was hardly as good as Thompson's. It was intercepted by Halfback Jack Myers on the Redskin 41, and six plays later the Eagles were on the 16.

It was fourth down, however, goal to go, so Patton got into the third of his seven plays during the game. He booted a field goal from the 23, just in case the score later became close. It didn't, and the invaders had all the insurance they needed midway of the second period when they staged a 67-yard march that wound up with Van Buren going over from the 4.

The second half was barely two minutes old when the 'Skins' Dick Poillon kicked out of bounds on his own 44 and saw Philadelphia make it 31-0 in three plays. This time it was Bosh Pritchard, former VMI ace, who did the scoring on the longest touchdown play of the game.

He slanted into the left side of the line, came out clear and at the end of a 32-yard sprint he tore away from Sandifer to reach pay territory.

Van Buren Scores Again

On one of his three trips with the ball, Bob Nussbaumer, Redskin halfback, fumbled and the recovery was made by big Al Wojciechowicz on the Washington 43. A 29-yard toss from Bill Mackrides, replacing Thompson, to Neil Armstrong figured strongly in the next goal-ward advance.

Again it was Van Burean, always good for a little yardage, who rammed over from the 7. A nice bit of hurdling over Tommy Mont accounted for the final yard.

The parade came to a merciful end when Dick Hubert intercepted a Baugh pass late in the third quarter, tossed to Pat McHugh who ran for a touchdown. It was an illegal forward pass, however, so the Eagles were forced to do it a slightly harder way.

Starting on the Redskin 47, they ripped to the 7 in a series of three first downs, their last of the game. At the start of the final period Ernie Steele, a veteran from the University of Washington, started from 4 yards away and galloped around right end for the final T. D.

There were 13 minutes left but you got the idea the Eagles were "in."

Head Coach Turk Edwards of the Washington Redskins decided to mastermind his team from a roof scouting box instead of the sidelines yesterday, a shift which made the Skins' 45-0 flogging by the Philadelphia Eagles no easier to take . . . Owner George Marshall's post-game comment was: "I don't care to discuss anything tonight" . . . 35,584 people, 1007 short of capacity, shelled out good money to see the debacle and that leaves the field wide open for clever conclusions. . . .

The Eagles had no kick (of the fourth-down variety) coming until the middle of the third period . . . Then Joe Muha, who was kept busy with eight kickoffs, punted for the first time . . . The game lost the Redskins their second defeat in four games and about $77 worth of footballs . . . Cliff Patton kicked seven of 'em into the stands, six for extra points . . . With yesterday's 14, the 'Skins have now drawn 31 penalties in their last two games, losing 290 yards.

Stonewall, Dalton Fight Here Tonight

It's a toss-up between "Stonewall" Jackson, hard-hitting Washington scrapper, and Tom Dalton, Chicago lightweight making his debut here, in their 10-round boxing bout at Turner's Arena tonight.

On past performances their meeting should produce one of the liveliest fights of the young indoor season. Dalton, a 20-year-old former Windy City Golden Glover, has won 38 of 40 professional bouts and he has met some of the better fighters of the division around the Midwest.

Stoney is a year younger than the kid from Chicago but already he has won notice among the lightweights and welterweights in winning 21 of his 24 fights to date.

Jackson's impressive victory over "Sonny Boy" West recently in Baltimore has caused Chris Dundee, New York manager, to become interested in the local belter.

Chris is ready to pay Manager Billy Edwards $5000 for Jackson's contract if he beats Dalton tonight.

Jackson probably will enjoy a weight advantage of as much as 5 pounds, with Dalton expected to scale 135 to Stony's 139 or 140.

Puggy King, local puncher, reappears on tonight's card after a five-month lay-off. Moving up to the featherweight class, Puggy meets Walter Ham in a four-rounder.

Three other fours match King Dave with Angelo Marini, Russell Seaver against Ben Harrison and Puggy Lyons with Bobby Suma. A five-round bout will find Leroy Holt trading with Julian Keane. The show starts at 8:45 p. m.

Hogan's 275 Wins Golf

Glendale, Calif., Oct. 17 (AP).—Routing the opposition with a last-round eight-under-par 64, Ben Hogan captured the inaugural $15,000 Glendale Open Golf Tournament with a 72-hole score of 275.

Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago started the day with afour-stroke lead over Hogan and shot a 70 to finish in second place with 277.

Hogan's win was worth $2450 and brought his earnings in PGA-sponsored tournaments for the year to $35,547.

Skip Alexander, Lexington, N. C., sinking a 35-foot putt on the 18th green for an eagle and 66 for the day, finished third with 279.

CBS May Enter Fight Game

New York, Oct. 17 (U.P.).—Negotiations are nearly completed for the Columbia Broadcasting System and the Music Corporation of America to enter the fight game by purchasing two-thirds of the stock in Tournament of Champions, Inc., it was learned tonight. Announcement of the transaction may be made tomorrow or Tuesday.

Stranahan Wins Hardscrabble

Fort Smith, Ark., Oct. 17 (AP).—Frank Stranahan, Toledo, Ohio, added a second Hardscrabble Country Club invitational golf tournament title to his record today with a 7 and 6 victory over Jack Geiss, St. Louis, Mo.

He was three over par (71) on the morning 18, but only one over on the last 12 holes in the scheduled 36-hole final match.

Bisons Triumph

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 17 (AP).—The American Hockey League Buffalo Bisons opened their home season tonight by trimming the Hershey Bears, 3-1, for the Bisons' first victory.

Merchants Take Undisputed Metro Lead

Mohawks Lose, 12-0; Arrow Tied

terday as Champion Southwest

Eddie Tawney was the star yes- Merchants moved into undisputed possession of the Metropolitan Amateur Football League's 160-pound Western Division lead by sweeping its third game in a row from Junior High School, 12-0.

In other games Arrow Linen tied Brookland-Woodridge Merchants, 0-0, at Gonzaga and Riverside Rollers defeated the Anacostia Lions at Gonzaga, 20-0.

In the only unlimited Metro League game of the day Anacostia Eagles, the Western Division leader, outclassed Alperstein's Department Stores, 30-0, at Mount Rainier High School.

Southwest's Tawney started things rolling in the first quarter when he passed to Franny Ellis on Maryland's 5, and then hit pay dirt, plunging over on third down.

Tawney and Sammy Moore teamed up in a 60-yard running offensive in the second period that Moore terminated by going over.

Ray Nash saved the day for Southwest with four timely pass interceptions, one of these turning up in the third period when Maryland was down on the host team's 10.

Brookland-Woodridge made a strong scoring bid in the first quarter when it carried to Arrow's 2, but was halted at that point. Arrow Linen advanced to Brookland's 10 twice, but was held there.

Anacostia Eagles struck twice in the first quarter against Alperstein's when Frank Burbach ran 15 yards off tackle to pay dirt and Don Purdy pitched a long strike to Chuck Ehlman, who carried on from the 30.

Carl Comer and Stash Zelenski registered for the Eagles in the third period and a pass, Paul Blane to Pete Guarria, made it 30-0 in the final quarter.

"Sleepy" Thompson made two touchdowns and Bob Kelly another in Riverside's romp over Anacostia Lions. Buck Taylor kicked the two extra points.

No Game; Mud

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 17 (AP).—The mud in Civic stadium was too deep for football today, so the scheduled Western New York Little Three game between Canisius and Niagara was postponed until Tuesday night.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Loyalty Probes Clear Great Majority Of Workers Charged

The Federal worker whose loyalty is in question has a 16-to-1 chance of being cleared by his agency loyalty board.

The record shows that the agency boards have disposed of 1122 cases through September 18. Only 69 employes were found to be disloyal; the remaining were cleared.

Furthermore, the record reveals that those employes who appeal unfavorable decisions of the agency boards have a reasonably good chance of being acquitted. Thirty-six of the 69 employes who were judged to be disloyal by their agency boards appealed to their department heads. The decisions of the agency boards were upheld in 15 cases; the department heads reversed the boards in six cases (exonerating the employes), and 15 cases are still pending.

The employe who is judged disloyal by both his agency board and department head has one further appeal—to the Civil Service Loyalty Review Board. This loyalty "supreme court" has closed 10 cases and this is its record:

The decisions of the agencies were sustained in six cases; the agencies were reversed in two cases, and advisory opinion was made to the Civil Service Commission in the remaining two cases.

The loyalty review board has broadening its checkup on the work of agency and regional loyalty boards. Up to September 18, it had assumed jurisdiction over 1107 cases on which decisions had been made by the subordinate boards. This is the record:

Post-audits were made of 954 of the cases and the review board concurred in the decisions of 945 of them. Dissents were made in nine cases. In other words, an agency board could clear an employe and the review board could upset the decision through its post-audit check-up, and just the opposite could happen, too.

The latest check shows that the FBI had checked upon 2,138,501 Federal workers and it found questionable data on only 6960 of them—and a good many of the accused employes were the victims of mistaken identities, baseless and petty charges as the hearing record implies. But it's a good thing for the employes to have their records cleared.

GAO: A group of claims examiners at the General Accounting Office have appealed to the Civil Service Commission to upgrade their jobs . . .

RECLAMATION: Only 12 of the 800 additional employes of the Reclamation Bureau to be fired are at headquarters here. However this Interior Bureau is one of the most highly decentralized agencies. It has only 340 out of 18,000 employes here.

GPO: The big bloc of printers at the Government Printing Office have decided to seek a flat increase of 50 cents an hour. The increase, if approved, would give the GPO craftsmen $2.61 cents an hour. A formal demand will be made soon on the Public Printer for the new wage contract along with the demands of the 11 craft unions. However, the Public Printer can't adjust wages until mid-December.

DECISION: Civil Service has decided that varityping is a form of typewriting and is not a substitute printing process. Therefore, the jobs of varitypers will not be taken out from under the salary-fixing Classification Act . . . PATENT: A written test for the 200 persons here who applied for the patent examiner test will be held tomorrow . . . CLERKS: An exam for Grade 5 and 6 clerks will be held Saturday in four high schools here. More than 4,300 persons have applied for it. The test is being held to fill jobs in the Fourth Civil Service region which covers Federal agencies in nearby States. Jobs in this city and nearby counties won't be filled from it.

JOBS: Civil Service will announce a test soon for ten types of lithographic positions such as draftsman, transferrer, engraver, plate maker, film assembler, plate printer, and trainee. The jobs will pay from $1906 to $4036 to start . . . The Bolling Field Air Base has exams open for three grades of welder and heat treater positions that pay from $1.21 to $1.80 an hour to start—Something new—a junior scientist exam—will be announced soon by Civil Service. It will be used to fill P-1 ($2974) mathematician, metallurgist, and physicist jobs. No written test will be required . . . About 7200 people here applied for the office machine operator exam which will be given October 30 in the high schools here.

PROGRESS: The number of war service and temporary employes in Government is declining steadily, from 592,400 to 395,900 in the past year. During the same period, people with permanent appointments jumped from 1,070,000 to 1,335,900. More than 70 per cent of the Federal workers in this country now have permanent status.

In the past 12 months, 188,449 war service and temporary people have had their appointments converted to permanent, and a total of 94,851 new probational appointments were made. To put it another way, two out of every three permanent appointments are now made to employes on the job.

Parking Cure Hoped for In 2-Purpose Structures

Garages Combined With Stores, Offices Seen as Solution By D. C. Agency

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Multipurpose buildings, erected by private enterprise, hold the key to most of the parking headache here, the District Motor Vehicle Parking Agency now believes.

McGavin

Structures combining parking facilities with stores, offices, or theaters, have several advantages, according to Charles T. McGavin, planning engineer in the agency.

The advantages listed by McGavin are:

1. They will take vehicles used by patrons and workers in the building off the street and out of competition for existing parking space.

2. They will attract patronage to the structure, thus permitting high-volume parking operations at relatively low rates. Another cause for the low rates will be that other firms in the building, besides the parking company, will be contributing toward the cost of the high value land and the structure itself.

Projects Hard to Get Started

In the usual parking facility, only parking fee income is availabl for such use.

3. Parking operators will be able to offer gas, oil, lubrication and wash services to parkers, which will result in substantial revenue and also contribute toward a lower parking rate.

The local parking agency, under P. Y. K. Howat, has been in favor of such structures for some time, but has had an uphill struggle to get such projects started. The first problem is high construction costs, which has not only discouraged such ambitious efforts, but has delayed most commercial building.

The second has been the difficulty in lining up all necessary tracts of land for such giant operations. The Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, operating through the District Commissioners, can offer some assistance in this direction.

The District government already has the right to condemn land, under eminent-domain powers, for use as parking facilities. This, however, has been avoided thus far and negotiations encouraged instead.

Zoning Change Urged

Another thing which could stimulate such building construction would be adoption of zoning regulations requiring builders of large structures to provide self-contained parking. This has been urged by planners in some cities as a means of making builders face the problems resulting from their efforts.

In Washington, the District Zoning Commission already requires that new multiple housing provide specified amounts of off-street car spaces in ration to living space involved and presently is considering an amendment which broadens this regulation to include institutions such as hospitals and convalescent homes. The proposition of including office buildings, store structures and theaters has not yet been under discussion here.

While more ambitious efforts are being considered, the Parking Agency is continuing its plans for expansion of fringe parking lots, which are expected to alleviate the downtown parking problem. Two lots are now in operation and several others are being negotiated for or are under consideration.

Piano Work Of Mozart Well Played

By Richard Keith

The fourth concert last night in the National Gallery's Mozart Festival was devoted to works for the piano.

The somber and despairing Fantasia and Sonata in C minor opened the concert. The overpowering sweep and intensity of the lengthy Fantasia leaves one feeling that everything has been said and yet the Sonata which follows manages miraculously to continue, from other vantage points, to survey this vast scene of desolate sorrow.

The familiar and delightful A major Sonata, which closed the program, is the perfect companion piece. A set of Variations on "Salve Tu, Domine," and several single compositions, including the moving Adagio, K. 540, made up the rest of the program.

Lonny Epstein, veteran pianist and teacher, gave technically competent readings of all the works. Her tone control and careful attention to even the most minute details were remarkable. Many points usually overlooked were given thoughtful attention. Nevertheless, there are many who would disagree strongly with Miss Epstein's basic conception of Mozart interpretation. Mozart was what might be called a "natural" creator; his music is self-explanatory. The perfection of detail is built in and when one emphasizes each facet, the effect is that of going over a tapestry with a magnifying glass. The great power which drives the composition from beginning to end is constantly thwarted. It is simply the old story of gilding the lily. This general style of interpretation might very well be the result of years of teaching the pieces to careless pupils. Such clearness of detail in such a notoriously difficult place to play in as the gallery garden is an admirable accomplishment.

Hume Sings Sensitively

Paul Chandler Hume, baritone, presented a program of unusually interesting music at the Phillips Gallery yesterday afternoon. He gave intelligent and carefully shaped performances of four songs by the still sadly neglected Hugo Wolf, an aria from Montemezzi's "Love of the Three Kings," four little sung songs by Faure and a group of folk songs arranged by Niles, Hays and Britten.

Hume's diction is unusually good and his voice, pleasant, well-controlled and sympathetic. His voice was particularly suited to the sensitive Wolf and Faure songs. Paul Calloway's accompaniments provided excellent support.

Thousands Take to Parks and Wooded Glades Where Autumn's Beauty Abounds for All

The leaves are turning yellow and red and brown. The geese are honking as they float along Rock Creek. There is the blue haze of many campfires in the woodlands.

Yes, it's autumn.

Yesterday Washingtonians by the thousands took to the woods to celebrate the advent of the new season. In balmy weather which got no hotter than 78 degrees they thronged through Rock Creek Park by horse, cycle, in automobiles and on foot. About 40,000 of them went to the Zoo.

There they saw, if they looked, a vicula, which is a four-footed animal looking something like a llama wearing an unusually heavy coat this year. Tame white deer nuzzled up to the fences to greet small children.

Balloons and popcorn, ice cream and crackerjack were everywhere.

By way of contrast, the downtown areas were not as filled with strollers as on some Sundays past. Many were drawn to the professional football game, others to sandlot football games in the local parks.

In Rock Creek Park itself, there was activity everywhere. Groups of the hardiest woodsmen were scaling the long banks of the park, climbing over rocks, sliding down to the creek bed.

Less adventurous souls spent the afternoon preparing such meals as steak and baked potatoes (in jackets) in outdoor ovens. Small boys searched the creek for frogs or anything else interesting that came by in or on the placid stream, which yesterday was wearing a thin, bespeckled coating of dead leaves.

Down on the Potomac, the river, in choppy waves, had lost its summertime appeal except for those who watched the Sunday sailboat races off Hains Point, and for a few bicyclers and strollers along the seawalls.

The excursion boat which all summer has been plying in and out of local waters was tied up, silent and alone, at its moorings yesterday, surest sign that summer is indeed over.

A solitary fisherman who refused to believe that the season had run out, complained to whomever would listen that he hadn't had a bite all afternoon.

As a portent, perhaps, of coming cold, the weatherman says to day will be much more wintry than yesterday. He called it "chilly" actually, with a high of about 54 degrees.

Navy to Mark 173d Birthday At Open House

Operation "Open House" will keynote the Navy's 173d birthday celebration to be held on Navy Day, October 27.

Some 20 major Navy establishments in the Washington area will invite the public to inspect their operating facilities and view special exhibits of the "new look" in Navy strength on that day.

Preceding the Navy Day celebration will be memorial flower services held October 24 at the Naval Air Station Anacostia, for Navy men who were killed during the war. Following the religious services the flowers will be placed aboard a Navy plane and flown to sea.

At 12 noon Navy Day the Military Order of the World Wars, will conduct ceremonies at the John Paul Jones Monument at the foot of 17th st. nw. The Navy band will present a concert before the ceremonies.

Dr. Roberts to Preach In Baptist Campaign

Dr. Paul Roberts, pastor of Central Baptist Church, Decatur, Ala., will preach at 8 o'clock tonight and through Friday at Petworth Baptist Church, 7th and Randolph sts. nw. He also will preach at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. on October 24.

The services are a part of the city-wide Baptist evangelistic campaign now in its second week. Breakfasts for Baptist ministers are being held at the church today through Friday at 8 a. m.

Drops Opposition

Democratic Unit Neutral On Charter

The Montgomery County Democratic State Central Committee announced yesterday that it will take a "strictly neutral" stand on the proposed Montgomery County charter on which county residents will vote November 2.

The central committee, the policy-making body for the Democratic Party in the county, said its neutrality, however, will not prevent Democrats as individuals from participating in the charter campaign.

The statement was signed by Committee Chairman J. Bond Smith.

"Many Democrats oppose the charter, and many Democrats favor the charter," the statement said. "The Democratic Central Committee's official position on the charter is one of strict neutrality."

The statement added: "This position in no way suggests that any individual or group should not take as active a part for or against the charter as such person or group chooses."

The charter, if adopted, would change the form of Montgomery County government to the county manager type. The issue has been pending for several years.

In 1946, the Democratic State Central Committee, which has been reorganized, officially opposed the charter then drafted. Many changes were made in the charter draft, however, in 1947.

Girl of Three Hurt in Fall From Taxicab

Linda Owden, 3, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Owden, Briggs rd., Silver Spring, suffered head and leg injuries yesterday when she fell from a taxicab on Wheaton rd., a mile north of Kensington, Md.

The driver, Irving F. Gates, 38, of Rockville, Md., took the child to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, where she was treated for a cut on the head and brush burns on the legs.

Gates told Montgomery County police of the Bethesda substation that he was traveling at about 40 miles an hour when the child, who had been playing on the floor in the rear of the cab apparently opened the door.

The police report did not say whether the child was alone in the rear of the cab.

Five persons were injured, two seriously, in a three-car collision involving a police accident investigation unit car yesterday in the 3700 block of Minnesota ave. ne.

The accident occurred when a car driven by Mrs. Mary Pratt, 37, of 4319 Kane pl. ne., going south on Minnesota ave., sideswiped the police car headed in the opposite direction. The Pratt car then collided head-on with a third vehicle driven by Eugene R. Pilkerton, 46, of 1430 W st. se., a truck driver at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Admitted in serious condition at Casualty Hospital were: Mrs. Marie V. Pilkerton, 50, wife of the third vehicle's driver, and Jerry Butler, 48, a passenger in the Pilkerton car. Mrs. Pratt was charged with driving on the wrong side of the street.

In VD Fight

15-Year-Old Tells Story Of Infection

A 15-year-old District girl who had led a normal, reasonably happy childhood until her mother's death was recently brought to the Health Department's rapid treatment center because she had syphilis.

The girl, who had beome so promiscuous she had exposed 10 other children to the disease, told her story in one of the thousands of interviews through which the Health Department attempts to find "chains of infection."

With tears in her eyes, she told the nurse of a year of loneliness after being placed in a home where the woman in charge had 10 other children and little attention was paid to her.

Discovering and tracing such chains of infection is the keystone of VD control, according to Dr. A. Truxton Morgan, epidemiologist in the Bureau of Venereal Diseases and one of the officials conducting the current anti-VD campaign.

A detailed study of interviews shows that 85 per cent of the sex partners, other than married couples, are friends, while the casual pickups account for less than 13 per cent of the VD cases. The prostitute contact is an almost negligible factor.

It was also learned that among those who acquired VD from someone other than the spouse, the original meeting occurred most often in a tavern, bar or restaurant. For this reason, the Health Department has stressed the placing of literature on VD in the rest rooms of such places.

The home of one of the sex partners is listed as the place where the majority—59 per cent—of exposures to syphilis and gonorrhea occur, while a hotel or rooming house is mentioned in about 25 per cent of the cases.

Dr. Morgan pointed out that the "chain" of infection is actually a web, complicated by untreated promiscuous persons and by reinfections.

Arlington Firemen To Hear Safety Expert

Red Cross disaster work will be discussed Tuesday night by Charles E. Harmon, Red Cross safety services director, who will speak at a meeting of the Arlington County Firemen's Association.

The meeting will be held at 8 p. m. in the Clarendon No. 4 Firehouse, 1006 N. Hudson st., Arlington. The drill committee of the association will report on the question of weekly fire drills and first-aid classes for the firemen.

Man Fatally Stabbed in Argument at Gas Station

Victim Succumbs At Gallinger, Police Seeking Assailants; Soldier Assaulted

A man stabbed in the head during a fight in a filling station at 21st st. and Benning rd. ne. died at Gallinger Hospital early yesterday.

Witnesses said the victim, James H. Butler, 34, of 730 Newton pl. nw., was arguing with Leroy Brown, 25, of 1230 Oates st. ne., near a phone booth when the stabbing occurred. Police are hunting for Brown.

In another fight, Pfc. Newell D. Weaks, 19, stationed at Bolling Base, suffered a possible skull fracture when he was hit on the head with a bottle in a restaurant in the 900 block 9th st. nw. early yesterday.

The soldier was treated at Emergency Hospital, and removed to Bolling Base Hospital, where his condition was reported as serious.

Held for investigation in connection with the assault was Paul Douglas Watson, 22-year-old legless amputee of 1213 Vermont ave. nw.

Two women were charged with assault with a dangerous weapon after Thomas Dunkin, no fixed address, was hit on the head with a wine bottle and stabbed in the head during a fight at 334 Dixon's Court sw., early yesterday.

Dunkin was admitted to Gallinger Hospital. Charged are Beatrice Harris, 33, of the Dixon's Court address and Agnes Harris, 47, of 207 F st. sw.

Woman, 70, Charged With Firing Shot

A 70-year-old woman who police say is a self-described minister, was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon yesterday after she had fired a .38 caliber shot from her front porch near where a group of children were playing.

The woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Murrey of 1510 Montello ave. ne., asserted the children, all between the ages of 8-12, were on her property at the time.

The children denied the assertion, although police reported that Mrs. Murrey had complained a number of times about neighborhood youngsters annoying her.

The defendant was released in $1,000 bond for Municipal Court appearance today.

Fisherman's Sweater and Hat Found

A clew to the identity of a fisherman believed drowned in Georgetown Channel near Chain Bridge Saturday was uncovered yesterday when Mrs. Elsie McDade, 1611 O st. nw., identified a hat and sweater found floating nearby as belonging to her husband.

Mrs. McDade told police her husband, J. William R. McDade, told her he was going fishing Saturday afternoon and failed to return. Harbor police dragged the channel area unsuccessfully yesterday.

McDade, 32, has been employed as a laborer at Mount Alto Hospital here for the past several years. Father of two children by a previous marriage, he has lived in the District for the past 15 years, Mrs. McDade said.

Library Group to Meet

First fall meeting of the D. C. Library Association will be held at 8 p. m. Wednesday at the Southwest branch public library, 7th and H sts. sw.

A roundtable discussion on the preliminary report of the fourth activities committee of the association will be held.

Amvets Chief to Speak

Harold Alan Keats, 35-year-old national commander of the Amvets, will be the guest speaker at a luncheon held by the American Public Relations Association's National Capital Forge, today at 12:15 p. m., at the Lafayette Hotel, 16th and I sts. nw.

Psychologists, Policeman and Attorney Speak

Forum Finds Good as Well as Bad in Comic Books

Two psychologists, a police officer and an attorney last night reviewed the effect of comic books on children, and decided the funnies had virtues as well as faults.

The discussants included Dr. Thelma Hunt and Prof. Lakin Phillips, members of the George Washington University psychology department; Capt. William T. Murphy of the Fourteenth Precinct, Police Department, and Nathan M. Lubar, attorney.

They spoke on the District Roundtable Forum program sponsored by the Junior Bar Section of the District Bar Association over Station WINX, with Leonard S. Melrod as moderator.

Dr. Hunt said that on the credit side of the comic book ledger was their visual appeal and the fact they could be used by parents to teach children.

On the debit side, she said, was the fact that they aroused emotional tensions, perhaps kept children from sleeping properly and thereby interfered with their health.

"Emotional tension . . ."

"Comic books have been charged with producing anti-social behavior," she said, "but I don't think comic books alone can be blamed for delinquency and unsocial behavior."

Lubar said comic books have received too much blame as a cause of juvenile delinquency—which is due "to a combination of things."

"Comic books," Professor Hunt said, "are the one thing that the public has seized on to blame."

Captain Murphy described his study of comic books when he was head of the police juvenile bureau, and said, "we selected 35 that we thought had some features that were objectionable and asked the three distributors in the city if they wouldn't cooperate in stopping circulation of them."

"They agreed, on a voluntary basis, because they felt a moral obligation to the community," Murphy said, "and later the comic book publishers or their representatives came here and talked it over. They, like their distributors, were cooperative, and soon after that formed an association among themselves to improve the books."

Among the improvements the publishers agreed upon, Murphy said, were that certain portions of the human form would not be unduly exaggerated, that sex would be minimized, females would be decently clothed, crime would not be presented in attractive form and children would not be depicted as committing crimes.

"Visual appeal . . ."

"Comic books are good, bad and indifferent," Dr. Hunt said, "I think the parent has a responsibility in this censorship job."

Lubar, stressing their value as visual education, said "parents have a real responsibility in interpreting comic books to their children."

Professor Phillips said "reading a comic book alone and with your father, who interprets it, are two different things."

He stressed that he didn't "condone the stories most children are taught, such as 'Little Red Riding Hood' and 'Jack and the Beanstalk'—bad emotional experiences and unrealistic."

The psychologist said he believed such stories as "Little Red Riding Hood" and "Jack and the Beanstalk" had "survived only because of their appeal to adults."

"It is only recently that we have learned a little of what the child's world is like," he declared.

Captain Murphy recalled, however, that parents in Milton, Mass., frowned on Frank Merriwell during his youth there.

Area News In Brief

Policeman Dodges Speeder, Shoots

A Sixth Precinct policeman early yesterday fired three shots at a speeding automobile after the driver, he said, tried to run him down at 65 miles an hour.

The officer, Pvt. Ray L. Roberson, did not know whether any of the shots took effect.

Roberson said he had stepped from the curb at 4th and Kennedy sts. nw. at 1:30 a. m. to flag down the car, a coupe occupied by two men, which was speeding north on 4th st.

The policeman said the driver switched off the lights and aimed the car directly at him.

The policeman leaped back to the sidewalk as the machine, barely missing him, careened down the street. Roberson then fired the shots, he said.

Auto Loses Panties

What looks good on one type of chassis simply won't do on another kind. Twelfth Precinct police concluded yesterday as they removed 19 pairs of women's pants and 3 brassieres draped on autos parked in the 700 block of Hamlin st. ne.

The display had been reported by neighbors. Police believe youngsters filched a bag of laundry and decorated the cars.

Trolley Operator Robbed

When Thomas R. McMahon, a streetcar operator of 709 13th st. se., went to the back of his car to obtain fare from a passenger who had failed to pay, another rider grabbed McMahon's change carrier containing $13 and fled.

The incident occurred as McMahon halted the trolley at 8th and I sts. se., at 9:30 a. m. yesterday. Police are seeking a Negro 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing 160 pounds and wearing a blue hat and covert cloth coat.

F. E. Sullivan Dies After Heart Attack

Frank E. Sullivan, 60, Washington representative of Frankfort Distillers Corp., died late Saturday at his fishing cabin near Gunston Cove, Va., while vacationing there.

Mr. Sullivan, whose body was found in the cabin early yesterday, was stricken by a heart attack, his brother, Paul A. Sullivan, said.

A native of New Castle, Del., he came to the District with his family as a child and received his education in public schools here. Prior to joining Frankfort Distillers more than 15 years ago, he had been in the real estate business and also was employed by the Washington Terminal Co.

A widower, Mr. Sullivan's late wife, Mrs. Irene McDonald Sullivan, died 30 years ago. He was a member of Blessed Sacrament Church at Chevy Chase circle, nw.

Mr. Sullivan is survived by his mother, Mrs. Margaret Gormley Sullivan; two daughters, Mrs. John A. Moreland and Miss M. Rita Sullivan; two brothers, James B. and Paul A. Sullivan, and a sister, Miss Gertrude Sullivan, all of Washington. Three grandchildren also survive.

Mass will be said at Blessed Sacrament Church at 9:30 a. m., Wednesday. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Broken Family Rescued by Salvation Army

The Washington Post

Mother tucks George, 2, into bed as sister, Xela, 7, looks on

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

The father you're going to read about is a former Marine, so you won't need to be told that he's not a quitter and that he's not afraid.

Or . . . to be exact . . . he's not afraid of anything he can fight with his hands and his heart.

Perhaps, though, he is afraid what jobless days and no home can do to a family—his family.

Even a Marine can be afraid of that and not be ashamed.

Those were happy days that followed his release from the Marines at the age of 18 after a four-year hitch. He was only 19 when he married his sweetheart, only a year younger than he, here in 1929.

Storm Clouds Gathered

He drove a cab. They had a home. And there were children.

First there was Thomas, now 19. Then Anna Louise, now 12. Then Xela, now 7. And—two years ago—George, the baby.

Storm clouds gathered two years ago. That would be in May, 1946, when Thomas was stricken with polio, the great crippler, that left him with lateral curvature of the spine.

Then a serious stomach ailment laid low the father. Much of the time he had to desert his cab for his bed. As a result, last July he lost the cab he was buying.

Temporary employment followed. He worked when he could. It was not enough.

For six years, the family had been living in a home in nearby Maryland, paying $50 a month rent. They got three months behind in their rent and were asked to move last September.

Family Parted

The family was torn asunder. Thomas was sent to the Children's Hospital School in Baltimore (part of Johns Hopkins Hospital) for treatment.

Anna Louise, a junior high school student, was sent to stay with a niece of the mother here in Washington.

At this point, the father appealed to the Salvation Army, an agency supported by your Community Chest dollars.

He didn't appeal for charity—he appealed for a job driving a truck.

The Salvation Army acted swiftly. The mother and the two youngest children were installed in the Salvation Army's new and cheerful emergency home for women and children, at 1608 New Hampshire ave. nw. The father was taken in at the Army's men's social service center.

Mrs. Jeanie B. Kinsel, family welfare director of the Salvation Army, investigated all phases of this family problem.

Rehabilitation Plan

She found the father tall, blue-eyed, blond, intelligent. She found the mother an attractive brunette, intelligent, who, before she was married, had attended business school and worked as a stenographer.

What is to be done?

The father said he felt certain he could obtain work soon, so he has been referred to a hospital for a thorough medical examination and tretament.

The mother said she felt circumstances could be improved if she returned to work, so it was suggested she put the baby in a day nursery.

"Any necessary assistance," said Mrs. Kinsel, "will be given them for rehabilitation in helping them get settled in a home of their own at the earliest possible moment."

Cheery Note to Home

Until that time, the mother and her youngest two children will have a cheerful abode in the new Salvation Army emergency home on New Hampshire ave.

Although in occupancy since September 1, it still has not been formally dedicated.

It is a remodeled Colonial-type mansion that formerly served as a fraternity house.

In its remodeling, Salvation Army heads were wisely not unmindful that a cheery interior would do much for the despairing who would enter its doors. The walls are covered with bright paper. The floors are lustrous. It could be the interior of a fine club.

Matron at this new home is Mrs. John Campbell.

Chest Hopes To Reach 50% By Thursday

The 1949 Community Chest Red Feather campaign is expected to reach the half-way mark Thursday in its drive to raise $4,566,790.

At that time, Chest officials reported half of the soliciting job to raise operating funds for Community Chest agencies and the USO will be completed and a general report of the entire campaign organization is expected to show half the goal accomplished.

Today, Chest representatives for 85 Government agencies and departments will hold a special unit report meeting at 12:30 p. m. in the Washington Hotel. Their contribution reports are expected to boost substantially the $676,411 already collected in the drive. Guest speaker at the meeting will be Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving of the Army general staff.

Special progress reports also will be made by each branch of the armed services, of which one unit, Bolling Air Force Base, has already announced 100 per cent of its goal of $7,406.41.

Reports will be made by Business Units I and II Tuesday at 12:30 in the Washington Hotel, and Residential Units will give their report at the same time Wednesday at the hotel.

The drive for funds to benefit 104 Red Feather services and the USO will continue through November 4. It has now reached 14.81 per cent of the goal, officials said yesterday.

Cemetery Lots

FORT LINCOLN—2 exceptionally choice lots; 2 close south, premium values $450 and $425; must sell, as any reasonable offer considered. 723 13th st. nw. Mr. 1150.

If a telephone call were as simple as this . . .

. . . the only equipment we'd use would be flags. And, if we needed more of them, it would be a simple matter to make new ones from sticks and cloth.

But expanding and improving telephone service is an entirely different story. It means constructing new buildings . . . adding miles of wire and cable . . . installing complex switchboards and thousands of other precision-made devices.

That's why the job is so costly. Our present construction program alone requires millions of dollars—money that must come, as it always has, from investors. They entrust their money to us because they believe their investment will be secure and pay them a fair return.

The huge sums used in this program of progress do not come from the money paid for telephone service. This money must go to meet everyday expenses—wages, materials and other operating costs—which are now at the highest peak in our history.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, Not Quite Six, Success in Kindergarten, Is Having Hysterically Difficult Time Trying To Get Adjusted to Her First Year in School

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My daughter June, not quite six, is having an unusually hard time adjusting to her first year in school. She got along fine in kindergarten and was quite ready for her first year of school, her teacher said.

Now after being in school two weeks she comes home crying pitifully, and today she returned home after being in school just an hour, on the pretense that she felt ill. She has always been easy to manage and adjusted to situations much more readily than my son, who is eight; therefore her attitude surprises and worries me.

I had thought perhaps she wasn't ready for first grade work, after she came home a week ago, tearful and upset because teacher had reprimanded her when she just stood at the board, unable to write numbers from one to four. I had her sit down to try the numbers at home and she did them without difficulty. Also today at home she wrote numbers from one to ten, which her teacher says is "ahead of the class."

Parental Discord in the Background

I GIVE HER plenty of love, take the children places and share all their interests. When questions of sex have come up I have always answered them honestly, but in a manner that avoided emphasizing the subject, as I didn't want to invest it with undue importance, especially with June, as that's all she could talk about for a time. Incidentally, I've learned that some surprisingly precocious and sordid notions circulate amongst children her age.

My husband and I have been married nine years, he was in the Army for two years when she was quite young, and we have just begun to be more compatible in the last six months; and I don't know if this has any bearing on June's recent attitude, but I hardly think so. However, I realize that I need advice in order to help her and my respect for your judgment impels me to write to you. S. J.

Starting School No Easy Venture

DEAR S. J.: Starting to school poses a psychological ordeal for any child. This is a lesser known fact of life. How he accommodates the experience depends upon his social maturity (for his age), his sense of security in relation to family, and general preparedness to meet new situations without clinging dependency upon sentimental championship.

As you know, it is standard practice to enroll a child in the first year of school after his sixth birthday, a practice born of the theory that in general a child less than six years of age is psychologically unready to leave home (as it seems to him), and fend for himself in an unfamiliar world of impersonal authority and baffling labor, against a backdrop of strangers, young and old,—cut off from family the live-long day.

Any child's growth pattern is faltering and uneven at best, even when, by and large, he is making steady progress on all fronts. Thus, though June may be "bright" enough for first-grade work, she may be short on broad-based self-confidence as yet, and her incipient hysteria of the past fortnight may signify, simply, that you are rushing her formal education to her general detriment, in starting her to school when she's "not quite six."

Neurotic Anxiety Burdens the Child

Again, her panic in class may be fomented by a stricken notion that you put her in school to be rid of her. She may have overheard you speak in tones of relief of gadabout plans "after June is in school," so that at school she may feel not only "rejected" but abysmally out of touch with your whereabouts. This, if combined with the factor of normal unreadiness for the school-experience as such, might seriously demoralize her, causing her to feel genuinely if inexplicably ill, and instinctively obliged to come home, to see you, as the only "cure."

Now, two more points: Your stress on maternal devotion suggests that you may be an unduly anxious, specially protective mother, which, alas, usually means a mother who unconsciously resents the existence or the demands of her children—or maybe one particular child—yet overtly strains to be a good mother despite her inner conflicts. June's insecurity-tension apart from your apron strings is typical neurotic behavior in a sensitive child thus ambivalently mothered, and the fact that you've been on bad terms with your husband may be at the core of her diffuse anxiety.

Which leads to another point, namely: a child starved for real tenderness in a disturbed family relationship tends to relapse into, or stay fixated at, an infantile level of erotic anxiety, artlessly revealed by compulsive engrossment in sexual phenomena, a trait of June's that bothers you. Which further implies that her problem-conduct mirrors home difficulties.

For advice: limitations of space compel me to say that you must have first-hand help from an expert in family relations, to explore such clues and relieve June's worries at their source. M. H.

How to Clean Aluminum Pan

What can I use to remove burned prunes from an aluminum pan? I have used steel wool, but the substance is very hard and will not loosen at all. M. R. N.

Sometimes such burned-on deposits can be loosened by placing the dry pan over a burner. The idea is that, as it heats, the pan will expand enough to loosen the deposit. Be sure to stay right with the pan, for it takes a very short time if the treatment works. When the large pieces have been loosened, remove the pan from the heat, allow to cool and remove the remaining discoloration and smaller stained areas by scouring with cleaning powder and steel wool.

What will remove iron rust from white and colored shirts, both rayon and cotton? M. R. N.

Use a commercial rust removal product which is sold at some drug stores, following the directions which come with the product. Or, light stains may sometimes be removed by sprinkling them with lemon juice and salt. Rub the lemon juice and salt into the fabric well and allow it to stand for several hours. Rinse thoroughly.

Would you tell me the name of a firm that would be able to replate a brass coffee table? The brass has worn off and the table has become dull and rusty. M. E. R.

One firm which will refinish the table if it is brass, or replate it if it is not, can be reached by calling Metropolitan 1134.

Please tell me if good-quality paper drapes, the nondrip, fire resistant kind, suitable for an informal living room can be purchased in Washington in 2¾-yard length and if these can be used without a cornice? E. H.

Department, variety and 10-cent stores carry nondrip, fire-resistant paper drapes, but they come in standard 2½-yard length. These drapes can be used satisfactorily without cornices because they are stitched at the top in such a way as to form a heading.

Whitneys Give a Housewarming; Party Also at Cafritz House

By Marie McNair

The Assistant Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney gave a housewarming yesterday in the Georgetown house on 30th st., which they've leased for a year and which they've done over with great taste and charm.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz had a cocktail party, too, at their home on Foxhall rd., and many guests happily passed the afternoon hours between the two houses.

The house which Mr. and Mrs. Whitney occupy is owned by Mrs. Paul Bartlett, widow of the sculptor, was recently occupied by the British Minister and Lady Balfour and before that by the William Burdens of New York.

It has a beautiful rambling garden on two levels and flagstone terraces shaded by old trees. And there's no prettier setting for a party.

As dusk descended candles flickered in hurricane lamps to light the way to the gerden steps; floodlights played on the half dozen members of the Air Force Band in their bright blue uniforms stationed at the end of the greensward, and indoors a member of the band sat at the piano to play soft music as an accompaniment to the tea-time chatter.

Mrs. Whitney greeted guests in the soft gray and beige drawing room wearing a perfec black frock made with wide cuffed neckline and a bouffant skirt appliqued in velvet scrools half way up the skirt. A purple orchid was pinned to her tiny velvet purse.

Gift From China

The Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Koo, brought a gift to the housewarming party—a pair of deep blue satin pillow coverings embroidered in Chinese dragons in burnished gold. A brace of brown orchids in a long stemmed vase were sent by friends and also many of the bouquets of flowers which were to be found in every room.

In the shadowed garden I recognized the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Kleffens, Gen. Omar Bradley, Chief of Staff, and Mrs. Bradley with a pink ostrich tip bobbing on her black hat; the Norwegian Ambassador, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, and Mme. Morgenstierne in the new taupe shade with a round hat of greige ostrich. I was to meet them later at Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz's house and also to see Mme. Koo there pouring tea.

Mrs. Lauris Norstad, wife of the general, was ever so smart in swishing black taffeta with a wee black velvet hat. Mrs. Clark Clifford's frock looked like "Vogue" with a flared skirt of leopard skin silk topped by a black blouse and worn with a halo of leopard skin for a hat.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. McCloy were there and the Stuart Symingtons—he's Secretary of the Air Force. Then there were the Pierpont Morgan Hamiltons, he sporting a Republian tie in red, white and blue, cavorting elephants; the Leslie Biffles and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, smartly turned out in brown.

The Belgian Ambassador, Baron Robert Silvercruys and Gen. William F. McKee, discovered they were both celebrating birthdays yesterday; and the good-looking couple whom several people seemed vaguely to remember turned out to be Capt. and Mrs. Richard Coleridge who were here from England during the war and are back again for Captain Coleridge's tour of duty with, I believe, the British naval staff.

Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed were there in the garden and Gen. Conger Pratt, and his handsome Sadie; Mrs. Eugene Carusi with a white ermine tippet adorning her black velvet suit; the United States Ambassador to the Philippines and Mrs. Emmet O'Neal, who were reminded by gracious Eleanor Whitney of the occasion when she sang before a group including Mrs. O'Neal, and of the silver and coral root bracelet from the Philippines which Mrs. O'Neal presented to Mrs. Whitney when the concert was over.

Wears Dior Gown

Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Kenneth Royall went first to Mr. and Mrs. Whitney's party, went on from there to join the gathering at the Cafritz's hospitable house.

In the long drawing room with picture windows looking out over the town, the smartest of new frocks and hats were on display. But the hostess herself was the best dressed woman in the room, in Dior's black draped gown the narrow skirt erushed into a wing-like drapery at the side, the strapless bodice slashed down the front and filled in with a plastron of bois de rose velvet.

I saw Justice and Mrs. Harold Burton making their way through and being stopped at every turn; and Mme. LeGallais, wife of the Luxembourg Minister, elegant in black with a filmy veil on her hat, taking her turn at the tea table. And James Parks and his bride, the former Grace Pulver, still receiving nuptial congratulations.

Mrs. Conger Pratt and Mrs. Irene Caldwell, constantly being mistaken for each other, were both there, and Senora de Baraibar, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of Spain; Elovius Mangor, Second Secretary of the Norwegian Embassy, with Mme. Mangor, whose black satin hat faced with pale blue matched the ostrich tips pinned to her dress.

Mrs. J. H. T. Mitchell and her daughter, Anne, being greeted by old friends, are just back for a few days after a summer in California and Europe. And getting a warm "welcome home" was Hilda Vallarino, daughter of the former Panama Ambassador, who's here for the weekend from New York and staying with the Peter Ansberrys.

Erwin Devron played the piano and gathered around were Fred Roy and George Williams, Miss Bertha Joseph and Drew Pearson, the Nat Luttrells and Pen Hogan.

Then—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Glover and Mrs. Randall Hagner, wearing a tricky hat of plaid taffeta; Anis Azer, Egyptian Minister; Mrs. Burdette Fitch, Mrs. Constantine Stackelberg, Mrs. Gordon Young, Senate George and her fiance Comdr. Whiting Wicker; the Emil Hurjas, and Mr. and Mrs. James L. Houghteling.

Mrs. Goodwin There

Mrs. Clarence N. Goodwin was full of plans for her Latin American fiesta in Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. Thad Brown was just as full of ideas come the Republican victory.

And so—to name a few more there were the Argentine Ambassador, Dr. Jeronimo Remorino; Princess Halim, Frank Rediker, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Mrs. Harold Walker and her son, Aldace; Mrs. Parker West, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim—Polly wearing the new back look in a frock of black and green taffeta; the Ecuador Ambassador and Senora de Dillon, Judge George Neilson, and Mrs. Neilson in a striking lampshade gown of white taffeta; Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth and Dr. and Mrs. Floyd S. Rogers, jr.

Gen., Mrs. Reynolds Welcomed Home

Maj. Gen. Russel B. Reynolds, chief of special services, and Mrs. Reynolds, who recently returned from a two months' trip to Europe, were given a welcome home party on Saturday at the United Nations Club by Miss Florence Taaffe and Miss Ethel D. West. Other guests were department executives of the Office of the Chief of Special Services, including officers on duty in the headquarters, and their wives.

While in Europe, General Reynolds attended a conference of special services officers from the European command in Bad Nauheim, and inspected special services facilities and programs in Germany and Austria

When You Give—Give Enough

Swing into action! Fat and toned muscle can't occupy same space. Proof is Karin Booth, M-G-M's dancing star, who swings through this exercise 100 times a day . . . and her waistline is 21 inches! But take it easy, girls, start with a dozen swings

Let Yourself Go—And Swing!

By Ida Jean Kain

FOR MOST people "swing" means music, dancing and fun, so why not swing through shaper-uppers—that's fun, too. Swing exercises are more beneficial since they induce a natural rhythm of the muscles and an exhilaration of the spirits.

SET EXERCISES to music, take it on the down beat—swing it!

Position: Stand with feet well apart, arms hanging loosely in front, wrists crossed with a loose-jointed, relaxed motion, trunk flopping forward, head down.

Movement: Swing the arms apart, high in the air, rising on the toes . . . like a rag doll coming to life. Then relax, flopping forward again. Keep it up in one-two rhythm. As you pull out of the slump, give your whole body a lift-up with the middle muscles! This exercise releases tension, jogs the circulation and strengthens the big muscles of the body.

NOW FOR A NEAT and trim waistline . . .

Movement: On the first count, swing the right arm well across the body. On the second, swing it high up to the right and back, moving the upper part of the body in the direction of the swing. A little fancy footwork and this could pass for a Spanish dance routine. Keep swinging around, a dozen or so times, then change arms and swing again—you don't have to settle for a dumpy waist.

LET YOURSELF GO with this number . . .

Position: Stand with feet well apart, arms down at sides.

Movement: Without bending the knees, keep a firm grip on the middle muscles and bend down to touch right fingertips to left ankle, flinging left arm as far back as possible. Remain in this bent-over position and swing the left arm across to touch the right ankle, flinging right arm backward. Keep in the groove 10 times through using the one-two count. If you slump in the middle on this number, all slim bets are off.

Don't strain or overdo, just relax and swing. A relaxed swing session is an antidote to fatigue. Exercise to music takes the kinks out of mind and muscles.

'My Own Schedule'

Some children, who have a lot of trouble doing things on time and cause worried parents a good deal of grief, can work things out by having their own schedules. Often, we parents keep after the youngsters, hoping that they will eventually learn to get to school, to bed, to music lessons and to all sorts of other places on time. But nagging and scolding or even "gentle" reminders don't seem to work too well.

With the help of the child, a typed or neatly printed schedule can be worked out. It should include such important items as: 7 a.m.—out of bed and start dressing; 8 a. m.—breakfast served; 8:30 a. m.—help clean up dishes; 4:30 p. m.—piano practice; 4:30-5:30 p. m.—free time; 5:30-5:45—get ready for supper, etc., etc.

If the youngster can have a real hand in determining what should go on the schedule, and be allowed, after consulting parents, to make necessary changes and be largely left on his own in following it, there is a good chance that his own schedule will be fairly well followed.

There to Stay

When lining dresser drawers or shelves with plain oilcloth, give the place to be covered a light coat of shellac and then put the oilcloth into position over the varnished surface while it is still wet. It will act as a light glue and keep the oilcloth in position until it wears out.

Elbows Guide To Kitchen Work Area

By Cynthia Lowry

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—Take a look at your elbows, madame, if kitchen chores are back-breaking drudgery.

Efficiency engineers, watching women baking pies, peeling potatoes and washing dishes, have found that the comfortable, restful height of your "working surfaces" parallels your elbows.

So, if your kitchen counter is waist high, stop worrying about that pain in your back. Start rearranging your kitchen. It's not as hard or expensive as it might seem.

The New York Heart Association, interested in saving the energy of thousands of homemakers who must take things easy, has developed a "work simplification" kitchen. Primarily designed for women with impaired hearts, most of the ideas can be happily adopted by the hale and hearty.

The heart kitchen has two work counters: One for such activities as baking which use long-handled implementss; the other for food preparation using short utensils. The baking counter is 32 inches high—so you don't have to reach up to wield an egg beater. The other is set 36 inches above the floor, so you can scrape carrots with arms comfortably placed, elbow height, in front of you. Of course, if you are an out-size, it's always possible to working sitting down from a chair which places you at the proper working height.

Much thought and effort has gone into the actual planning and arrangement of the kitchen. The committee, headed by Dr. Lillian Gilbreth, efficiency engineer, concentrated on putting every item in a spot where it could be reached without wasted steps.

Fresh vegetables, sauce pans, knives and such items are stored near the sink, because you usually use them with water—and it saves a special trip to the faucet. Roasting pans, skillets, canned vegetables (and the can opener) are within arm's reach of the stove—point of original use.

It takes extra energy to bend and stretch, so the experts have used higher shelves and low drawers to stow utensils and foods which are used infrequently. Shallow shelves, they found, are work savers, too. You don't have to remove a stack of saucepans to reach the frying pan back of it.

By rearranging one woman's kitchen in an experiment, Dr. Gilbreth and her associates were able to cut down to one sixth the number of steps a woman took to make a coffee cake. She had been wasting five out of every six steps by poor planning.

The heart association's work simplification program isn't confined to the kitchen. Its experts recommended long-handled dust pans and brushes, as well as mops and carpet sweepers, to save backs. They suggest using dust mitts instead of cloths, so both hands can be used at the job. They sing of ironing joys, when the board is low and the ironer is seated comfortably at a chair. They advocate lightweight metals in all utensils used.

"Including the women with cardiac diseases, there are between four and five million disabled housewives throughout the country who have reason to conserve their energy output," said Dr. Gilbreth. "These women unquestionably constitute the largest group of employed disabled in the United States.

"But every homemaker who is interested in elimination or minimizing the work often associated with kitchen chores should be interested in the things that make life easier for the disabled."

New Series Set On Christian Thought

A series of public lectures on Christianity and modern thought will be given by three members of the faculty of the Virginia Theological Seminary beginning at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Washington Cathedral library.

A similar course last year was attended by more than 300 persons. The committee sponsoring the lectures is an informal group of lay people, and the courses are not sponsored by any religious institution.

Teaching the courses will be Dr. A. T. Mollegen, professor of Christian ethics, Dr. Clifford L. Stanley, professor of theology, and the Rev. Kenneth E. Heim, professor of church history, all of the Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria.

"Christianity and History," the basic course, will consist of 32 lectures on Wednesday evenings at 8:30 o'clock. It will cover the historical Jesus, interpretation of Christian thought in successive historical periods, the effect of Christianity on Western culture, and Christian imperatives today.

Dr. Mollegen will begin the series with a study of the historical Jesus and will give the concluding section on Christian ethics in May and June. Sections on Christian thought and Christianity and culture will be given by Dr. Stanley and Mr. Heim. Beginning March 1 Dr. Stanley will give a series of lectures on Tuesdays at 8:30 p. m. on Christian theology in the context of present day conditions.

'Slim Idaho' Is Killed In Motorcycle Crash

Richmond, Va., Oct. 17 (AP).—Dewey Hubbard Aderhold, 23, of Richmond, professional singer known as "Slim Idaho" to audiences of the Old Dominion Barn Dance radio program, was killed instantly today in a motorcycle-automobile collision.

The accident occurred this morning at the intersection of Routes 1 and 51 at Four Mile Fork in Stafford County.

Aderhold and a companion, Charles Hughes Wiltshire, 24, also of Richmond, were riding the motorcycle. Wiltshire, who suffered multiple injuries, was taken to a Fredericksburg hospital in serious condition.

Home Team Wins District Bridge Play

The annual District Bridge Tournament closed last night at the Hotel Roosevelt in a victory for the home team, while another local foursome tied for second place.

The players to capture the silver Eynon Bowl were Mrs. Irene Surgui, Gene Hermann and Paul Kibler of Washington, and Mrs. Given Pritchard of Huntington, W. Va. They piled up 30 matches through two sessions of play.

The new champs had a two-board lead over Mrs. Edward Cotter, Fred Karpen, J. J. Parish, all of Washington, and Ben Johnson of Spartanburg, S. C., and the intercity lineup of Mrs. Doyle Driver of Arlington; Dr. Arthur Salasky of Newport News, Va.; Herbert Gerst of Norfolk, Va., and Claggett Bowie of Baltimore.

Defeat Is Offset

The victory offset defeat of District players on Saturday, when the open-pair championship fell to Mrs. Robert Bayliss of Richmond and Claggett Bowie of Baltimore.

Runners up in Saturday's game were Mrs. Sally Young of Philadelphia, second-ranking woman player in the United States and David Warner, also of Philadelphia. Best local showing in this game was fourth place for W. S. Benedict and Larry Reynolds.

The Woodward Cup, trophy for the open-pair championship is a most traveled District trophy. The last time it was won by local players was in 1941. The cup is permanently owned by the Washington Bridge League, and winners obtain custody for a year, later receiving replicas for permanent possession.

Consolation Game

There were the usual upsets in the open qualifying round as witness these leaders in the consolation game: Leroy Thurtell of Washington and R. L. Miles, jr., of Norfolk, Al Westrich and H. R. Rex of Washington, Mrs. Eva Klein and Miss Kathleen McNutt of Washington, J. L. Kaster and Louis Freedman.

Although the tournament ended, still uncompleted late last night was the Metropolitan Pair Championship, in which the first session leaders were Frank B. Levi and W. J. McDevitt of Baltimore, with Mrs. Mary Goodstein and Mrs. Howard Surkin of Washington, in second place.

Boy Kills Matron, Opens Jail Cells, But Most Remain

Kansas City, Kans., Oct. 17 (U.P.).—A 15-year-old boy tonight strangled a matron to death in an attempt to lead a mass break of juvenile inmates from the Wyandotte County jail. Police said the boy choked Mrs. Gertrude Hutchinson, 63, to death with a silk scarf to get the cell keys she was carrying. He unlocked the cells but only one inmate joined him in the escape attempt.

One inmate, a girl, screamed for the jailer, giving the alarm. The killer, whose name was withheld, and the other boy were captured.

Science Brings Biggest 'Boom' in History

A scientist says the problems involved in building an atom-driven airplane are now 99 per cent solved.

I hope they keep an eye on that other 1 per cent, to make sure that it doesn't set off an aviation "boom" that lifts the industry to the highest levels in its history.

SECOND THOUGHT

I'm just a little Democrat,
But, still, a loyal guy.
I'm for my party and my boss
Until the day I die.

And yet—at times I wonder what
Will come of such as me
When our opponents take the reins—
HORRAY FOR TOM DEW-EE!
P. B. Publico.

WE AIN'T RITZY

One of our editorial writers recently used the phrase "the balance of the speech" when he meant "the remainder of the speech."

Eagle-eyed Windsor Thompson of Glenn Dale, Md., promptly protested that the use of "balance" to indicate "remainder" is a colloquialism, and therefore unworthy of such a dignified editorial page.

In a way, perfectionist Thompson has a point. But I can't agree with his conclusion.

It seems to me that any editorial page which, in season, carries learned discussions of the exploits of "Mr. Stinky Stankey" and "Mr. Flash Gordon" is entitled to a colloquialism or two.

RADIO'S FAVORITE SERIAL IS STILL CORN

There was a threat over the weekend that a strike of radio writers might interfere with the flow of soap opera scripts.

It was a calamity that most of us faced with complete equanimity.

Besides, the networks could break such a strike in a jiffy. Where the writer's current script leaves off, the broadcasters could pick up the next day with last year's episodes, and nobody would be any the wiser.

Young Dr. Malone would still come between Ma Perkins and the Second Mrs. Burton, and Portia would still Face Life, and find it Can Be Beautiful.

GIVEAWAYS

"Cat and seven young kittens; we love them, but our child is allergic to cats." (Wisconsin 8729.)

"Three adorable kittens, 3 weeks old." (North 5636.)

"Three coal-black kittens, 4 months old; very gentle and playful." (Ordway 4572.)

"Mother cat and three kittens; also half-grown cat." (Chestnut 0220 after 6:30 p. m.)

QUICKIE QUIZ DEPT.

So you're a good speller, eh? Without consulting the dictionary, when do you use "descendant" and when "descendent"?

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

A friend of mine encourages her 5-year-old son to answer the telephone and try to take messages for mama, who, meantime, continues her work in another room.

The youngster is hard to understand and has a hard time understanding others. It's all very discouraging to anybody who calls.

What do you think of the practice? Grace Wells.
Arlington, Va.

Dear Grace:

Children learn by doing, and parents should encourage them to try their newly developed skills as soon as possible. But not too soon.

I think it's rather rude to one's callers to permit an infant to answer the phone before he's ready to tackle such a task.

But what proud parent can resist the urge to brag: "Look. He's answering the phone already." Bill.

WELL-TRAVELED PATH

Mr. Gallup's latest poll indicates that the founding fathers knew what they were doing when they arranged for New York ave. to lead straight to the White House.

STAMP OF DISAPPROVAL

R. H. Tubbs of 520 N. Thomas st., Arlington, Va., observes that the Chrysler Corp. is cooperating with our local campaign against horn blowing.

Chrysler makes a car which scatters pedestrians silently; there's a sign on its front end which warns: "Dodge."

District Liner Tubbs failed to mention that these signs make quite an "impression" on pedestrians who aren't nimble enough to get out of the way in time.

THEY'RE RAILROADING POOR ADOLF

A German denazification court has tried Adolf Hitler and found him guilty of being a major Nazi.

If Adolf had been alive, he'd have been sentenced to serve 10 years in the pokey. But Ilse Koch, who is currently down to her last lampshade, undoubtedly could have showed him how to get it cut.

So far, there's been no comment from General Clay as to whether the evidence supported the verdict.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Scotty Reston did a piece for the New York Times last week, telling about the difference between the polished Thomas E. Dewey who makes formal speeches to city audiences and the folksy Tom Dewey who talks to rural gatherings.

I wonder what Scotty could have been thinking about when he concluded his article with:

"'Goodbye everybody,' shouts the Governor. 'Goodbye.' And then the Victory Special pulls out . . . usually with a jerk."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW York.—After the Eisenhower induction ceremonies at Columbia University Fanny Hurst, Adele Nathan, author-director of the Chicago Railroad Fair, and Carol Nevans of This Week, entered their car. They noticed a man who was almost run down in his vain attempt to get a cab. "Want a lift downtown?" Miss Hurst asked. The man got into the car . . . "Aren't you afraid of being kidnaped by three women in the Big City?" Miss Hurst asked him . . . "It would make a fine story, in Baltimore," said the man. Then he wrote something on a sheet of paper, and had the three ladies sign and attest to it—"This is to certify that on October 12, in New York City, we abducted Dr. Isaiah Bowman, President of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md."

Ernest Hemingway, now finishing his novel in Paris, doesn't expect it to win any prize. For although Hemingway's writings command the highest prices, he's never won a prize . . . He once told me that the only time anybody ever honored him was a notification that O'Brien's Best Short Stories would be dedicated to him. Hemingway bought a copy, turned to the first page, and found it 'Dedicated to Ernest Hemenway."

The investigation by Erle Stanley Gardner and Ray Schindler of the case of C. G. Boggie, who was convicted of murder 13 years ago, not only proved Boggie's innocence but also produced evidence showing who really murdered the victim . . . The jewels worn by Rosalind Courtright during her engagement at the Persian Room were borrowed from Rubel's by her husband. After he returned the jewels to Rubel's, his wife discovered a $6000 necklace in her deposit box, and a note from Courtright "This one wouldn't go home. Call it your next birthday present,. . . . Ellin Berlin, author of "Lace Curtain," says that when she first met her husband Irving, her conversation was so precise that she referred to his hit song as "What Shall I Do?"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Behind Dewey-Revercomb Rift

By Drew Pearson

It isn't hard to understand—when you know all the inside facts—why Governor Dewey has so carefully steered clear of helping Republican Senator Chappy Revercomb of West Virginia in his reelection fight.

Revercomb

Not only did Revercomb ram through Congress the Displaced Persons Act discriminating against Jews and Catholics, but on July 6,1948, he telegraphed the Justice Department asking that some of the worst Nazis in the USA be kept in this country.

The Justice Department had ordered these Nazis deported, but, for reasons best known to himself, Senator Revercomb demanded that the deportation order be canceled.

Here are some of the Nazis the Republican Senator from West Virginia wanted kept in the USA:

Max Albrecht Blank—Indicted for conspiracy to commit espionage in the Duquesne case. Pleaded guilty to violating the Foreign Agents Act and was sentenced to 18 months in jail. Also employed in the German Library of Information, a famous Nazi propaganda outfit in New York.

Andreas Henrich Jans and his wife, Emma—Visited by one of the eight Nazi saboteurs in Chicago when they arrived in this country by submarine. Jans and his wife were given $3600 in cash by Nazi spy Neubauer for safekeeping.

Paul Knauer—The United States Supreme Court, ruling on his denaturalization, said on June 10, 1946: "There is solid, convincing evidence that Knauer before the date of his naturalization and subsequently was a thoroughgoing Nazi and a faithful follower of Adolf Hitler."

Fritz Robert Koehler—Member of German Bund and employe of German Consulate in Los Angeles. During war he refused to work, saying he would not aid United States war effort.

Hartwig Reese—When arrested, the Nazi flag, swastikas, photographs of Hitler and Mussolini, and Fascist propaganda were found in his possession. He was leader of the German Bund in San Francisco.

Kurt Ludecke—Author of the book, "I Knew Hitler," which was dedicated to Ernest Roehm, Gregor Strasser "and many other Nazis who were betrayed, murdered and traduced in their graves."

The list of Nazis Senator Revercomb wanted kept in the USA is too long to be published here, and will be continued in a future column.

Keeping Record Straight

President Truman spoke sorrowfully about how the Republicans gutted Western reclamation projects at the last Congress—which they most certainly did. But he didn't remind—the people that he rewarded the chief GOP enemy of reclamation — Congressman Robert Jones of Lima, Ohio—with a juicy appointment to the Federal Communications Commission.

Red Tape Over Air

Veterans going into the air-freight business are still snarled in red tape, can't get Government certification from the Civil Aeronautics Board. In formal hearings, the board has been lined up almost solidly behind the big airlines that are opposing the veterans.

One CAB member, Harold A. Jones, was so eloquent in expressing the big airlines' point of view that the grateful American Airlines counsel, Dan Gribbon, injudiciously let slip this remark in front of everyone:

"Mr. Jones, I don't think you could have put your company's policy into better words."

Jones coughed nervously, colored with embarrassment.

Note—The Air Force has announced the urgent need for building up an air-cargo fleet. Yet usually astute Seth Richardson, counsel for Northwest Airlines, testified: "The whole proceeding is inopportune. There may be need for an air-freight industry 5 or 10 years from now, but not now."

Whisky Battle

The whisky industry, which has witnessed many a David and Goliath battle, is headed for another when the Internal Revenue Bureau opens hearings today on the question of labeling Scotch whisky made in the USA.

The powerful Scotch whisky trust—Distillers Corporation, Ltd.—claims that the word "Scotch" means made in Scotland, and that this word should be banned from the labels of all American-made Scotch.

If so, a small group of American distillers, led by the Scottish American Distilling Co., of Peoria, Ill., claims they will be driven to the wall. They are already suffering unfair restriction in being required to label their product "Scotch-type" whisky, they argue. This makes people think it is an imitation of the real product.

Big American distillers of bourbon are officially observing a pious neutrality, while secretly aligned with the Scotch importers. Lone exception is Hiram Walker, which has been producing some domestic Scotch.

The others—Schenleys, Seagram and National Distillers—all act as distributing agents of various brands of Scotch imports. So they would shed no tears if some of their American Scotch competition were killed off.

To fight their case, Distillers Corp. Ltd., has hired the biggest name-lawyer available—John W. Davis, once Democratic nominee for President.

Not to be outdone, the United States Scotch distillers have hired Joseph Nunan, jr., former Commissioner of Internal Revenue. It will be a merry fight.

★ No. 27 IN A SERIES DEDICATED TO THE NATION'S CAPITAL . . Washington . . ITS INSTITUTIONS AND ITS PEOPLE ★

and its people who provide invaluable technological assistance to our Government

● The National Academy of Sciences . . . originated from our Government's vital need for technical and scientific advice during the Civil War. Since 1863, the Academy has served the Government whenever called upon for assistance. It receives no compensation for its services . . . the Government paying only for the actual cost of its investigations and reports.

● The National Academy of Sciences . . . organized the National Research Council in 1916, which is now composed of 1800 outstanding scientists. Most of the members of the Council are appointed representatives of major scientific societies of the country, together with representatives of Government bureaus, and a limited number of members-at-large.

● The National Academy of Sciences . . . limits its membership to four hundred fifty citizens of our country . . . and fifty foreign associates. There is no application for membership . . . nominations are presented by the Academy's sections representing the different sciences.

● The National Academy of Sciences . . . cooperated closely with the Office of Scientific Research and other federal agencies . . . and played a vital role in many highly confidential projects contributing directly to the outcome of World War II.

All material published herein has been secured from the National Academy of Sciences and the United States Library of Congress.

When Abraham Lincoln signed his name approving Congress' Act to incorporate the National Academy of Sciences . . . he gave to the United States a means of securing the aid and advice of the outstanding men in many scientific fields. Since that time, the Academy and its National Research Council have again and again come to the assistance of our Government. We live in an Age of Technology . . . an awe-inspiring era during which mankind is mastering the basic facts of his environment. To an ever greater degree, Science is affecting our lives . . . changing its complexion . . . providing us with new tools to make living easier . . . to improve travel and communication . . . to harness new energies for all our industries. It is of vital importance to all of us that our Government have at its side the country's leading scientists and technicians . . . vital to our national defense, vital for our domestic well-being. The Hecht Company is happy to salute the people of the Academy and the Council, who work without publicity or fanfare . . . and who contribute so much to our welfare.
